U. S. EXPECTED TO HELP CHECK DOLLAR'S FALL

MacDonald Tells Moley Parley Is Menaced by Threat to Gold.

London, June 29 (A.P.).—The expectation prevailed in some World Economic Conference quarters tonight that the Washington Government would cooperate in checking the gyrations of the dollar and thus save the parley from the threat of a breakdown over the vexing stabilization issue.

The belief was that America would take this action while still holding fast against immediate pegging of the currency.

The hopes that the conference had been saved were voiced at the end of a strenuous day in which countries forming the European gold bloc fought tirelessly behind the scenes for protection of their currencies, threatening to quit the conference if Great Britain and the United States refuse to cooperate.

Moley Meets MacDonald.

The climax came in a meeting of Prime Minister MacDonald, chairman of the assembly, with Raymond Moley, President Roosevelt's special envoy, in which Mr. MacDonald, holding an ultimatum from the gold bloc, was understood to have asserted that further progress was impossible as long as abnormal dollar movements threatened the gold currencies.

Just what took place at this encounter of the British premier and President Roosevelt's adviser remained a deep secret, but well-informed delegates expressed the belief that the British had cast their lot with the United States rather than with the gold group.

The British financial authorities endeavored during the day to pacify spokesmen for the gold countries with a statement to which the principal powers could adhere, indicating the desire of nongold countries to protect the gold group.

Two Statements Expected.

But this plan was eventually torn up and important conference quarters looked for issuance of two separate statements on the stabilization question, probably tomorrow.

The statement by the nongold group, constituted principally of the United States and Great Britian, is expected to set forth the impossibility of stabilizing currencies until internal economic conditions permit, but to state that a return to gold is the ultimate objective and that the prevention of unnecessary fluctuations, meantime, is desirable.

It was made clear that this would not constitute de facto stabilization of currencies but merely a move to cooperate to prevent speculation and the needless sudden shifting of funds.

Wheat Limit Conference.

The gold group is expected in French quarters to issue its own statement in the form of a resolution declaring determination to stand shoulder to shoulder in defense of the gold standard.

Interest in efforts to reach a four-power agreement on wheat acreage

Missing Sculptor, Durig, Back Home

Prof. Ernest Durig, missing sculptor, last night returned to his home at 1536 Connecticut avenue northwest. His return was shrouded with as much mystery as was his disappearance about a month ago.

Acting on a tip received from Baltimore police, Detectives Howard Ogle and Arthur Pihelly called at the Durig home and were greeted by the missing sculptor. Although he greeted the detectives pleasantly, he refused to discuss his disappearance or his whereabouts during his absence.

Police had information, however, that he had been in New York city and that vicinity most of the time.

36-HOUR WEEK SEEN IN TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Johnson Is Firm in Cutting Work Time and Raising Minimum Wage.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

A shorter work week and a higher minimum wage than was proposed by the cotton textile industry is expected to be incorporated in the first industrial code of the new deal in the economic life of the country.

The cotton manufacturers proposed a 40-hour work week and a minimum wage of $10 and $11 a week for South and North, respectively, in the code it submitted to the National Industrial Recovery Administration, which completed hearings on the proposal yesterday.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, and his aids took the code under study and began working out compromises. It is expected that the maximum work week will be reduced to somewhere between the 40 hours proposed by the manufacturers and the 30 hours asked by labor. What figure will be finally set is problematical. It is thought that the work week might be set at 36 hours a week.

A 36-hour work week would permit six-hour shifts through a six-day week. Labor has asked a six-hour day, five-day work week. The hearings have not been formally ended. It was announced they would not be concluded until tomorrow, consequently, the administration will go through the formality of meeting this afternoon and probably again tomorrow to hear whoever may want to come forward, even though none is expected to appear to change the picture through presentation of additional facts or new arguments.

Basis for the belief of labor of the cotton industry that the minimum work week would be shortened from the proposed 40 hours was found in the declaration by Gen. Johnson at the hearing on Wednesday.

"A 40-hour week in industry, generally, would not scratch the surface of our job of putting large numbers of unemployed back to work," Gen. Johnson said. "Indeed, I know of no other industry in which we could even receive for consideration a code proposing a 40-hour week."

The so-called minimum wage submitted by the manufacturers was not, in truth, a minimum wage because the code proposed to exempt from the minimum many persons

Miners Are Hurt By Ambush Shots

Harrisburg, Ill., June 29 (A.P.).—A caravan of 15 automobiles carrying about 30 United Mine Workers to their homes in Galacia after a day's work in the Peabody Coal Co.'s No. 43 mine here, was fired upon from ambush late today near Tuttle Bottom.

Windshields were shattered and two men were slightly wounded. Raymond Harris was shot in the left arm and taken to a West Frankfort hospital. A bullet grazed the left shoulder of Ed Ritter. A shot went through a hat worn by Leo Watham, but did no further damage.

The caravan was led by a car containing four deputy sheriffs. Frequent disorders have been reported since the mine was opened recently under terms of a contract with the United Mine Workers Union.

KAHN BARES GROUP OF FAVORED BUYERS

Identifies Prominent Men Enjoying Privileges in Security Syndicate.

By Harold J. T. Horan.

Prominent American industrial and financial figures were identified by Otto H. Kahn yesterday before the Senate Investigation Committee as enjoying privileged conditions in the purchase of stocks and bonds of over 30 corporations through his banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Percy A. Rockefeller, Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the board of the National City Bank; Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank and of the Bank of International Payments at Basle; Henry W. DeForest, of the Union Pacific Railroad; Newcomb Carlton, of Western Union, and L. F. Loree, of the Delaware & Hudson Co., together with several relatives of the Kuhn, Loeb partners were included in the syndicate that bought stocks and bonds at the syndicate price.

This represented a profit to the syndicate members ranging from ¾ per cent to 1½ per cent. The Kuhn, Loeb list was more restrictive than those offered by J. P. Morgan & Co., and the profits were confined to a smaller number of persons.

The revelation of Kuhn, Loeb's preferred clients switched the attention from the income tax inquiry that had so visibly affected Mr. Kahn's hitherto suave demeanor. Under the questioning of Ferdinand H. Pecora, the international banker was forced to have recourse to lapses of memory. Mr. Kahn admitted he had, however, made a payment to the British treasury, he thought, in 1930, of $4,480.20 on account of income tax.

He paid no tax, however, to the United States for 1930, 1931 or 1932. The reasons were virtually the same as had been adduced by the members of J. P. Morgan & Co. for their failure to make returns. The present

Dry Aids Kill Man And Jail 2 in Raid

Joplin, Mo., June 29 (A.P.).—Federal agents late today shot and killed Homer Weese, about 45, at a farm house near here in which they were seeking a whisky still. Harold Lane, leader of the agents, said Weese was slain after he opened fire on them.

Weese once published a weekly newspaper here. He served a short term in the State penitentiary about two years ago after being convicted of conspiracy to violate the counterfeiting laws.

The four agents, all from Kansas City, and E. E. Fisher, deputy sheriff from Greene County, said they seized counterfeiting equipment in a barn on the farm after the gun fight. Two men who drove up to the farm in a motor car later were arrested. They gave the names of W. J. Romans, Shidler, Okla., and W. E. Bauener, Jennings, Okla.

CARNERA TAKES TITLE, HALTING SHARKEY IN 6TH

Champion Is Far in Lead Until Right Uppercut Sends Him Down.

By Edward J. Neil.

Madison Square Garden Bowl, New York, June 29 (A.P.).—With one sweep of a mighty paw, that must have felt like a cobblestone wrapped in a leather sack, huge Primo Carnera, once a freak in a circus sideshow, knocked out Jack Sharkey in six rounds to win the heavyweight championship of the world, after being belted all over the premises for the greater part of five rounds.

It was a stunning ending to a savage fight that tore through the battle pit of the Garden's big arena, on Long Island, an ending as amazing to the scant crowd of 40,000 as the knockout Max Baer scored over Max Schmeling in the first of the season's heavyweight extravaganzas.

Makes Show of Him.

Sneering at Carnera's 260½ pounds, his awesome height and tremendous reach, Sharkey forced the issue from the start.

He wove forward, hands close to his body; feinting the mammoth Italian into pawing lefts the champion bobbed under, came up inside with two fists flailing to the body, or crossed with rights that started the Man Mountain trembling as if the earth were quaking under him.

After the first round, in which Carnera might have had a slight edge due to his punching in close, Sharkey made a show until the sixth of the man he gave a terrific beating only two years ago in Ebbets Field.

Even in the sixth, with the round almost ended, there was no hint of impending disaster for the champion. Sharkey bobbed in, as he had been doing from the start, found his opening, then flung a long, crashing right to Carnera's temple.

Short Right Uppercut.

The massive Italian pulled back, his lips drawn back from his white mouthpiece in a kind of a foolish grin. He mumbled something like "Good, good," as Sharkey tore back. Then he lifted his tremendous right fist to the champion's jaw as they came to grips. The punch was a short uppercut inside as they were on the ropes.

Sharkey crumpled to the floor by the ropes, stretched flat on his face, as the crowd came to its feet with one long, amazed roar. As Referee Arthur Donovan picked up the count Sharkey never stirred. He was just beginning to move, his face buried in

Col. Roberts Slain At Military Home

Dayton, Ohio, June 29 (A.P.).—Col. Vernon Roberts, executive officer at the national military home here, was shot and wounded fatally tonight by an unknown assailant as he sat on the front porch of his residence at the home.

The attacker, who alighted from a taxicab and fired four pistol shots at Col. Roberts without warning, fled on foot after the shooting. The taxicab driver, held for questioning by police, said the man ordered him to stop in front of Roberts' home. He said he did not know who the man was.

Col. Roberts died in a hospital shortly after the shooting. Physicians said all four shots had taken effect.

He died eight hours later. The owner of the yacht, valued it at $35,000, and a speedboat, which also was destroyed, at $4,000.

4 MAIN NAVAL BASES WILL BE DEVELOPED

Swanson Bares Plan for Big Fleet to Maintain U. S. Policies.

A new naval policy calling for the development of two main home bases for the fleet on each coast and an appraisal of the worth of airships was announced yesterday at the Navy Department.

Although Secretary Swanson did not reveal the future homes of the two main naval bases, it was learned on good authority that they will be at Bremerton, Wash., and in the San Francisco Bay area on the West Coast, and at Hampton Roads, Va., and Narragansett Bay region on the East Coast.

Observers look on the determination of the Democratic administration to evaluate the airship as especially significant in view of the recent congressional investigation into the Akron disaster, at the conclusion of which it was stated that the Navy must change its policies in regard to airship operation.

The new policy also calls for "avoiding frequent shifting of personnel," which was the practice under fire in the Congressional hearing into the Akron crash. Bureau of Aeronautics officials have shown a reluctance to change their policy in regard to transfers of airship officers, but it is evident that the administration and the general board of the Navy is heeding the Congressional warning of doing away with the airship program unless there is a change in policy, and that Secretary Swanson intends to see that the change is made.

"The fundamental Naval policy of the United States is to maintain the Navy in sufficient strength to support the national policies and commerce, and to guard the continental and overseas possessions of the United States," the statement declares.

With this as background a new general naval plan of procedure was

Dying Mother's Bequest Of Child Is Held Legal

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—A mother's bequest of her child to the maternal grandmother was upheld in probate court today. Mrs. Margaret T. Oudshoff, dying last May at the age of 28, bequeathed 9-year-old Margaret Elizabeth to Mrs. Kate M. Thomas, the grandmother.

The child's father, Rudolph Oudshoff, contested the will. He charged that such a provision would be contrary to public policy. Judge Oscar Caplan ruled the will legal and said the probate court has the right and duty to look after the welfare and custody of the children of deceased parents.

Hundreds More Lose Federal Jobs as Cuts In Economy Continue

DEFICIT CLIMBS AS BIG TAX BILL REVENUE DROPS

$1,750,000,000 Added to U. S. Debt, Putting It at 10-Year Peak.

By Lawrence Sullivan.

Uncle Sam will close his books for the fiscal year 1933 today with an operating deficit of approximately $1,750,000,000 added to the public debt since last July 1.

In addition, $1,255,000,000 has been added to the national debt for Reconstruction Finance Corporation advances, bringing the total debt outstanding as of June 30 to $22,189,739,000, the highest since the end of the fiscal year 1923.

The wartime debt peak on August 31, 1919, was $25,478,000,000.

Despite the billion-dollar tax bill enacted in the spring of 1932, total Treasury receipts for the fiscal year 1933 barely equalled those of the previous year.

The failure of the 1932 income tax schedules to yield anything like the estimated increase in actual revenue accounted for the unexpected failure of Treasury receipts.

Ordinary Receipts Up Slightly.

Total ordinary receipts for the year just ended were $2,000,000,000 against $1,964,989,730 for the fiscal year 1932. These figures are from the official Treasury statement as of the close of business last Tuesday. Relatively negligible changes will be made in the official year-end figures to be published next week. These corrections, however, will include only normal operations for the last three days of the current week. They will not materially change the picture of Federal finances as they stand today at the beginning of the new budget year.

The 1933 deficit brings the total governmental deficit for the last three years to $5,537,000,000, divided as follows:

1933	1,749,000,000

Although the war-time income rates written into the 1932 revenue bill were expected by Senator Connally, their floor sponsor, to yield about $450,000,000 in new taxes for the fiscal year just ended, income tax receipts at the Treasury up to June 28 were actually $300,000,000 below the total for the corresponding period of the previous year.

Income Tax Revenues Off.

Total income tax collections for 1933 were $744,142,185, against $1,054,849,947 in 1932.

The year 1933 marked the first time in the history of the income tax in the United States that total revenues

Rescue Expedition To Hunt Mattern

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Four men plan to set out early tomorrow in an airplane in search of Jimmie Mattern, whose attempted round-the-world flight ended more than two weeks ago when he took off from Khabarovsk, Siberia, for Nome, Alaska. No word has been heard from the San Angelo, Tex., flier since he left the Siberian town.

The "Mattern rescue expedition," which will be made in a four-place monoplane, expects to take off from Floyd Bennett Field at 4 a. m., Eastern standard time. The searchers expect to reach Winnipeg by nightfall. From Winnipeg they will fly to Edmonton, Alberta, thence to White Horse and from there to Nome, where they will make their base.

William Alexander, chief pilot, will be accompanied by Fred Peterman, a mechanic; Harold Persons, and Thomas Abbey, a Brooklyn motorcycle policeman.

7,000 Berry Pickers To Picket in California

El Monte, Calif., June 29 (A.P.).—Sheriff's officers reported today more than 7,000 Mexican berry pickers and sympathizers, in their refusal to accept the wage scale offered by Japanese growers in Orange and Los Angeles counties, were converging on El Monte to picket the groves in this district.

Officers said there had been no violence.

HURRICANE SPREADS DEATH IN TRINIDAD

Reports of Havoc Arrive as Weather Bureau Warns of Peril in Indies.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, June 29 (A.P.).—Scenes of death and destruction were described today as repaired communication lines brought first reports from southern Trinidad of havoc wrought by Tuesday night's hurricane.

Several persons were reported drowned as small boats foundered and a number of persons were injured when trees were uprooted.

The howling storm lashed the coast all Tuesday night and blew itself out Wednesday, leaving behind fallen telegraph and telephone poles, unroofed houses and broken oil field derricks.

The hurricane, accompanied by torrential rains, caused much damage in the southeast, but reached its height in the southwest, centering around the Paloseco oil district.

The greatest losses were reported from Labrew Pitch Lake district, Siparia, Guapo, Cap de Ville, Point Fortin, Paloseco, Penal and Cedros.

Several persons were reported drowned in the sinking of small boats on the coastline. One man working on a raft tied to a pier was blown out to sea. The body was found three miles away.

Two liners sank in San Fernando Harbor and six men and a woman, who were aboard clung to the wreckage several hours until they were rescued. Shipping was damaged at several other points.

The northern part of the island did not learn of the hurricane until today, due to the interruption of communication facilities.

The entire residential district in the British-controlled oil field was destroyed and scores of persons were homeless. An official of the oil company was severely injured when his automobile was struck by a falling tree.

Incoming liners reported rough seas due to the gale.

Canadians Recover 2 Students' Bodies

Edmonton, Alta., June 29 (A.P.).—Bodies of two young Colorado mining students have been recovered while search today continued for the third member of the party that set out for a canoe trip through Alberta's north country. The three were victims of a drowning tragedy on Lake Athabasca, north of Fort Chippewyan.

The bodies of Albert G. Comstock, of Bronxville, N. Y., and Robert J. Burns, of Nelson, B. C., were given a funeral service at Fort Chippewyan, according to word reaching here today. No trace has been found of the body of Robert D. Weld, of Watertown, Conn., the third student in the party. Identification in the case of Burns and Comstock was made certain by means of a money belt and denial information.

Full Effect of Changes Will Be Felt Later in Fiscal Year.

Department of Justice to Drop 100 More by July 15.

By Robert C. Albright.

Economy pressure yesterday squeezed additional hundreds out of the Federal service, despite forces operating to check the tide of dismissals.

The transition from current to 1934 fiscal schedules was incomplete in most departments. Indications were the full effect of personnel changes will not be felt until the new fiscal year is well under way.

The Department of Justice, which dropped 186 workers in the four months ended June 1, yesterday indicated from 100 to 150 more will go before July 15.

Married Workers to Go.

The Public Health Service announced the dismissal of 900 employes throughout the country, including nearly 100 doctors, nurses and clerks in Washington.

The Commerce Department prepared to release 200 married workers and to force 100 30-year employes to retire involuntarily today. Before July 15, 300 more married workers are scheduled to go.

No executive department was able to estimate the total number of dismissals under the new fiscal program, and furlough plans in most of the departments still were in process of formulation.

There was encouraging news for the workers in the hard-hit Bureau of Customs, where a fiorilling of vacancy policy has curtailed the bureau's staff by 1,000 in the past year.

Because of this policy, and the involuntary retirement of 100 thirty-year employes, Assistant Commissioner Frank Dow said dismissals and payless furloughs may be avoided. He believes the Washington staff of 190 can be taken care of. The service as a whole has been reduced from 9,500 to about 8,500 in the past year.

Although payless furloughs, generally, are not expected to run over 15 days in most Treasury Department offices, it was pointed out yesterday that no uniform policy will be worked out for the department as a whole unless the President intervenes. A number of bureaus will escape even a furlough.

New Steps Exempted.

Another of the new Federal emergency agencies yesterday was exempted from the 15 per cent cut ordered by Congress for old-line Federal employes. Comptroller General McCarl ruled employes of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation are immune from the cut, although the reductions will continue to apply to the older Home Loan Bank Board.

Secretary of Interior Ickes said he is awaiting a specific ruling from the Comptroller affecting employes of the new Recovery and Public Works Administration.

Some time ago the Comptroller decided employes of the Federal Railroad Coordinator's office need not accept the cut. At that time the ru-

WIDE PUBLIC WORKS READY FOR DECISION

(Associated Press.)

A widely scattered Federal building program on which excavations can start within two weeks after presidential approval and which will cost approximately $400,000,000 will be taken up tomorrow for a decision by the Cabinet board in charge of the $3,300,000,000 public works fund.

The program is composed of works requested by 60 or 70 governmental agencies and will be the first list of projects proposed directly by the Cabinet board. Its previous $400,000,000 highway allotment and $238,000,000 for naval construction were lump-sum provisions.

After the board acts, President Roosevelt must sanction the recommendations before construction starts, but Donald H. Sawyer, the public works administrator, said "the dirt will be ready to fly" within two weeks of the Chief Executive's approval.

Types of Work Proposed.

Pending final action, the board withheld details, but members said the act included allotments for the Army for flood control, rivers and harbors and housing work, for the Reclamation Bureau, National Park Service roads and trails, the Indian Office and for the other agencies.

To speed along its campaign to get the money moving as quickly as possible, the board yesterday asked a subcommittee to look into the question of having employment agencies in the various States supply men for wielding picks and shovels. A proposal that special offices be maintained for labor for the public works program is under consideration of the subcommittee.

As a further help in its work, the board set up a special labor advisory board to cooperate. The members are: Isadore Lubin, labor economist of the Brookings Institution, chairman; Michael J. McDonough, building and trade department of the American Federation of Labor; William Bowen, Bricklayers Union; Harry Broach, Electrical Workers Union; George Orris, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and John Coefield, of the Plumbers Union.

Interest Rate Discussed.

The Cabinet board decided yesterday to charge the same interest rates to States, cities, counties and other political subdivisions that are charged private interests for construction loans. The question of fixing the amount was referred to a subcommittee, with discussion of rates ranging from 3½ to 5 per cent. Secretary Ickes said "the rate should be small."

Federal agencies seeking a share in the fund were warned to ask for enough to supply the board with "the accurate and complete total cost" instead of just enough to start the project.

The Federal program was recommended to the board by a subcommittee, and Ickes explained the various projects had been under study "for a long time, and they can be started immediately."

"There are two types of projects," he said. "One is reconditioning and the other new construction."

He declined to give estimates of the cost of each type nor would he estimate what percentage would go to any one Federal department or bureau.

Fall in Swimming Pool Of Home Fatal to Child

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 29 (U.P.).—Patricia Fay Cannon, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Cannon, Nashua, N. H., was drowned this afternoon when she fell into the swimming pool at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cannon.

MORE WORKERS GET DISMISSALS IN CUT

ing was interpreted as pointing the way to general exemption of employes in the new set-ups.

Attorney General Cummings, in announcing prospective dismissal of from 100 to 150 more Justice Department workers yesterday, disclosed the department's staff had been curtailed to 8,836 on June 1. He said 71 more employes of the Bureau of Investigation have been ordered dismissed. Reductions were ordered in some 38 salaries.

Recently Attorney General Cummings told newspapermen some dismissals could not be avoided, but they largely would be confined to non-Civil Service personnel. Director of Prohibition Dalrymple released 1,300 employes of that agency early this week.

In announcing release of 600 employes of the Public Health Service, Undersecretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson said the number included those made in recent weeks and others to be dropped today. The total size of the service, which includes some part-time employes, is being reduced one-tenth.

Meanwhile, it became known about 195 civilian employes will have been dropped from Walter Reed Hospital today, as that unit laid plans to operate strictly as an Army hospital in the future.

The War Department yesterday issued orders placing some 6,806 civilian employes of the Ordnance Department throughout the country on a four-day-week basis, effective at once.

The general 15 per cent pay cut order issued by the President under authority of Congress expires today, but an extension is expected as a matter of course when Mr. Roosevelt returns from vacation.

Commerce Department Foreign Officials Back

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Summoned home from their posts in foreign capitals as an economy measure, 32 officials of the Department of Commerce foreign service arrived with their families on the United States Liner Washington today.

The rush back to this country started after the trade commissioners, commercial attaches and their assistants received notice from Washington, June 14, that their resignations would be effective July 31.

They were ordered to pack their belongings and board the Washington at Hamburg, June 21, or at Havre and Southampton, June 22.

Some said they barely made the boat. All declined to discuss the order or offer any criticism, preferring, as one of the officials said, to "take it on the chin without a squawk."

CIVIL SERVICE RAIDS HELD BLOW AT U. S.

Steward Says Job Hunters Would Replace All Regardless of Ability.

The civil service is being ravished by political "job hunters," whose aim is the displacement of all incumbents regardless of training and fitness, according to Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Speaking at a meeting last night at Schneider's Cafe of the organization committee of the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes' Unions, Steward declared:

"We are now witnessing the most violent, sustained and voracious attack leveled against the civil service since it was established, and no job, however small, will escape the spoilsmen."

Steward declared the removal of the merit system would be "disastrous and a national calamity."

Miss Gertrude M. McNally, secretary-treasurer of the organization, asserted that virtually all the Federal inspectional services have been emasculated "to the danger point."

Other speakers were National Vice President U. J. Biller, John Ginder, president of the District Federation; William S. Kinney, chairman of the organization committee; Leslie C. McNemar, associate editor of the Federal News, and Matilda Lindsay, national organizer.

Jobless Warned Away From Shoals

(Associated Press.)

A warning that the development of the Tennessee River basin "is not intended to be a reservoir for the unemployed of other sections" was issued yesterday by the Tennessee Valley Authority in a statement reiterating its policy to give available work to the jobless in the area of the project.

David E. Lilienthal, one of the three members of the authority board, said the board "is very anxious that word does not go out which would induce people looking for employment to come into the region of Muscle Shoals or Cove Creek."

He added: "There is no present need for outside help. Besides, it is planned to use people from the immediate territory. There are probably ten times more unemployed in that area than can be used on initial projects."

Cheaper Textbooks Aim of Conference

Atlanta, June 29 (A.P.).—Legislators of Southern States met here today for a series of conferences aimed at cooperative action for cheaper school books, with texts fully in keeping with customs and traditions of the South.

Senator Samuel W. Getzen, chairman of the Florida delegation, cited an example of their objectives in a preconvention statement saying "the books we are now using have lots of reading matter and pictures about growing grapes in California and wheat in North Dakota, but not much about raising oranges in Florida or cotton in Georgia."

The Florida senators propose that the Southern States adopt a unified system of common school books, which they say could be obtained far cheaper by letting mass contracts to publishers through competitive bidding.

They favor having representative educators from each of the Southern States select authors to prepare manuscripts for the uniform texts. Those manuscripts would be transformed into plates and the publishing house offering the lowest bid would get the job of printing books for all the States.

ibbean waters, south of Jamaica, to be on the lookout for an intense atmospheric disturbance reported Wednesday by the bureau to have reached "hurricane intensity."

The bureau charted the center of the disturbance, on the basis of steamer reports yesterday morning, as latitude 13 longitude 70 and its movement as west, northwestward, at the rate of about 10 miles an hour. This would place it at a point about 65 to 70 miles northwest of Willemstat, on the Island of Curacao, a Dutch possession.

The bureau said the storm apparently was continuing with "considerable intensity and small diameter." A steamer at an unestimated distance from the center reported a wind of 35 miles an hour yesterday morning.

Gen. Johnson Passes Unknown in Audience

(Associated Press.)

Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the industrial recovery act, left his place on the platform yesterday during the hearing on the cotton textile code and later slipped into a seat among the spectators in the crowded auditorium.

"Can you point out Gen. Johnson to me?" inquired a man sitting beside him.

"I wouldn't know him if I saw him," Johnson replied.

Gehlbach at Newark Ready for Air Race

Newark, N. J., June 29 (A.P.).—Lee Gehlbach, of Detroit, landed here tonight in the airplane he expects to fly in the crosscountry air race starting from Floyd Bennett Field Saturday.

Gehlbach, a flying associate of Jimmy Wedell, said Wedell also plans to enter the crosscountry race. Wedell left New Orleans this afternoon in his racer for New York.

employed in the mills, especially in the South.

Gen. Johnson has plainly indicated his thought that a minimum wage lumber, and more than a score of smaller industries have prepared or submitted tentative codes. It is proposed to consider first those involving industries employing large numbers of men and let the smaller ones wait.

Several of the other industries have been holding back to await the outcome of the textile code.

Consumers' representatives were before the administration as the public hearings closed yesterday. The major aspect of their argument was discussion of the rights and privileges of women in industry. Some wanted the code to prohibit women working at night. Others wanted other special privileges, but other champions of women's rights demanded that women be accorded the same privileges of working hours and wages as are accorded to men.

Miss Maud Younger, chairman of the National Woman's Party, was one of those who appealed for the same treatment for women. Miss Margaret Wiseman, executive secretary of the Consumers' League of Massachusetts, urged prohibition of night work for women. Miss Lucy Mason, of the National Consumers' League, urged banning of night work for women from 10 p. m. until 6 a. m.

John L. Barry, of the New Hampshire Federation of Labor, who said he appeared at the suggestion of Gov. John Winant, said that the 40-hour week wouldn't help unemployment very much and that $11 a week would not provide a living wage in his State. Flint Garrison, representing the Wholesale Dry Goods Institute, urged elimination of the provision for adjustment of contracts in the face of increasing prices. Robert W. Johnson, of Johnson & Johnson, makers of surgical bandages, reiterated his opposition to limitation on the number of hours machinery might be used and pledged himself in favor of a higher minimum wage.

FARM PACTS TO WAIT ON CODES FOR LABOR

Johnson, Wallace and Peek Must Approve Agreements of Both Kinds.

(Associated Press.)

Farm administrators decided yesterday to refuse approval of trade agreements covering food industries and other processing of agricultural products until wage scales and hours of labor meet the approval of administrators of the national recovery act.

In return, Gen. Hugh Johnson, administrator of the recovery act, will refuse approval of codes of competition involving industries using raw materials from agriculture, including foods and textiles, until the codes have been approved by Secretary Wallace and George N. Peek, chief administrator of the farm act.

It was reported last night that the basis of a definite working relationship had been completed by the two administrators carrying out suggestions made by President Roosevelt.

Details Public Today.

Each has established a representative in the office of the other and no major decision will be made without consulting with the other.

Some of the details of the new plan for full cooperation will be made public today at the first joint conference held by Johnson and Peek since they were established in office by the Roosevelt administration and charged with the duties of raising farm prices and increasing employment.

Many agreements have been presented farm administrators and many others are in the formative stage, but none has been approved so far. None of them contains provision for increasing or stabilizing wage scales or reducing hours of labor. The only mention of labor is contained in the proposed Chicago milk marketing agreement and its proviso is that only one employe be permitted to man a milk wagon.

Food Trade Agreements.

Farm administrators have their own acreage reduction program planned for cotton and have a definite interest in the effect adoption of a textile code might have upon the return to producers of cotton.

In some cases, it was reported, special labor codes may not be required in farm trade agreements if Johnson holds that the present scale of wages and hours of labor are satisfactory.

Trade agreements under the farm act are being considered by the meat packing industry, a large employer, and also food distributing agencies.

The National Wholesale Grocers Association and the American Wholesale Grocers Association have completed plans for a merger as a step toward presenting an agreement covering that business which would be aimed at eliminating "cut-throat competition" and "price cutting."

Farm administrators have been informed that the reduction in wages in food industries has averaged about 15 per cent, and that the number of workers has been reduced from 14 to 16 per cent.

Children's Love for Parents Of Opposite Sex Is Greatest

Freudian Theory Gains Ground With Scientists at Chicago Convention; Unconscious Desire of Sons to Kill "Rival" Fathers Is Described.

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—The Freudian theory that sex attraction determines the bond between parent and child gained statistical support at the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

Freud's concept was that children were more strongly attached to the parent of the opposite sex. Strong adherents contend that such love on the part of a child aroused also an unconscious wish for the death of the parent of the same sex, a feeling evolving from jealousy, the father, for example, being regarded by a son as a "rival" for his mother's affections.

Ross Stagner, of the University of Wisconsin, reported to a group of sociologists that studies he had made on children's attitude toward their parents apparently confirmed the general Freudian theory.

Stagner made his survey on a large group of boys and girls in their late 'teens, submitting to them a selected list of questions.

Of the group analyzed, he said, the girls showed stronger affection for their fathers, the sons for their mothers. He also found that verbal lashings aroused more antagonism toward parents than physical punishment, that children developed more hostility toward a father that was alternately mild and stern than one who was consistently inflexible.

New Yorker Held In Slaying of Two

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., June 29 (A.P.).—Trooper John J. Lawson, of the New York police, today identified Joe Quinn, 61, wanted for the killing of two special policemen at Middletown, N. Y., in May, 1932.

Lawson advised Franklin Schryver, district attorney of Orange County, N. Y., and said the attorney and probably two other officers from New York will come here to help return Quinn safely. Quinn was arrested Monday for intoxication.

The men slain were special officers at a Middletown Mental Hospital.

LEGION MAPS PLANS TO REGAIN BENEFITS

First Regional Conference Here Seeks Recovery of Economy Losses.

(Associated Press.)

A four-point plan having as its objective regaining for the veterans most of the benefits of which they were stripped under the economy act was outlined here yesterday at the first of a series of regional conferences of the National Rehabilitation Committee of the American Legion.

Northeastern States were represented at the regional conference here at which the program was drawn up for recommendation to the various State conventions of the legion prior to the national convention at Chicago October 2-5.

The program decided on yesterday follows:

That no war veteran disabled in line of duty shall suffer any reduction in the benefits he received prior to the economy law.

That the Federal Government hospitalize veterans who require hospital treatment but are not able to pay for it.

That the service connection rating properly granted veterans under laws before the economy act be perpetuated.

That benefits for dependents of veterans not be tampered with.

At the same time, while the Veterans' Administration was moving toward creation of the special boards of review that will consider their cases, the legion's rehabilitation committee, in a formal statement, urged all veterans to gather as much evidence possible to indicate their disabilities resulted from service and send it immediately to the Veterans' Administration regional office that handled their cases.

The presumptive cases—so called because a law in 1924 stipulated that for several diseases it should be presumed they originated in service—were to have been virtually all removed from compensation rolls July 1, but the compromise legislation enacted by Congress on its closing day provided for setting up boards to determine whether they should be granted the service connection rating.

Pending a board decision, or until October 31, the approximately 150,000 veterans in the presumptive classification will remain on the rolls and receive 75 per cent of the payments they received prior to the economy law.

The new law was interpreted by the legion and the committee as presenting to the board the question of "whether any evidence exists in the veteran's case which would lead to the conclusion that his disability resulted from his war service, other than by presumption." If no such evidence were presented, the board could cut the veteran off the rolls.

The reviewing boards, of which there will be between 60 and 90, will consist of five members, three to be appointed by President Roosevelt and two Veterans' Administration employes. The administration hopes to have them at work by July 10.

U. S. DEFICIT JUMPS DESPITE BIG TAX BILL

When income tax collections were at their peak, as a result of the war boom, this source of revenue yielded $4,000,000,000 for the fiscal year 1920.

From 1924 to 1931, inclusive, income taxes yielded an average of $2,000,000,000 annually. The depression inroads on profits everywhere cut this average income tax yield to roughly $900,000,000 annually for the fiscal years 1932 and 1933.

Elaborate Agencies Created.

But while revenues have been falling off steadily during the last three years, governmental spending has increased by leaps and bounds. Despite heroic efforts at economies in some directions, notably in case of veterans and Federal salaries, elaborate new functions and agencies have been established in every session of Congress to administer emergency measures flowing from the depression.

As a result, the total burden upon the Federal Treasury has been constantly increasing since 1930.

Because of altered methods of Federal accounting during the last three months, it is impossible today to make precise comparisons in all categories of Treasury outlay. The general trend toward an ever-increasing national debt is revealed, however, in the official monthly debt statements since June, 1930.

At that time the national debt stood at $16,185,000,000. At the close of the fiscal year 1933 it stands at $22,189,000,000.

The so-called nuisance taxes, reenacted in 1932, accounted for approximately $350,000,000 in additional revenue for 1933, yielding $846,932,184 in the year just ended, against $497,968,623 the previous year.

Customs Receipts Tumble.

Because of the continued decline in foreign trade customs receipts fell off from $325,752,571 in 1932 to $247,618,354 in 1933.

The above three items account for all but $150,000,000 of the Government's total revenues in 1933. The remainder of the $3,000,000,000 in Treasury receipts came from foreign debt payments, $65,000,000; Panama Canal tolls, $20,000,000, and miscellaneous receipts, $63,000,000.

Owing to the steadily increasing national debt and the more frequent calls of the Treasury upon the public market for loans, interest charges for 1933 were $676,768,372, against $589,314,546 in 1932.

The Postoffice Department closes the year with a deficit of roughly $120,000,000. This compares with $202,000,000 in 1932. In the year just ended, however, first class postage rates have ruled at 3 cents an ounce, against 2 cents an ounce in the previous year.

GOV. POLLARD CALLS SPECIAL ASSEMBLY

Session August 10 Will Give Attention to Beer, Repeal and Public Works.

Richmond, Va., June 29 (A.P.).—Assured that more than two-thirds of the membership of both houses were eager to act at once on beer legalization, arrangements for a repeal referendum and a public works program, Gov. Pollard today conditionally called a special session of the General Assembly for August 10.

Only a few constitutional requirements which proponents of the special session termed "mere formalities" awaited disposal before the governor will issue his formal call, expected before the end of the week.

These technicalities concerned the presentation of the petition to the governor. Although telegrams from more than two-thirds of the members were addressed to Senator William M. Tuck, urging a special session, the executive said that such communications should be addressed to the governor.

Tuck, leader of the latest movement to get two-thirds of the Assembly membership behind the special session agitation, said no delay would be experienced in conforming with this constitutional requirement.

In addition to the commitals from 26 senators and 68 members of the house, which Tuck and Delegate John Q. Rhodes, of Louisa, presented to the governor, Tuck predicted that four-fifths of the membership of both houses would have registered in favor of the extraordinary session by tomorrow.

A four-fifth vote of both houses of the Assembly on a beer bill would make the legislation an emergency act to become effective from date of passage, thus relieving the usual 90 days' delay before a bill becomes effective.

Tuck said that assurances from other senators and house members, although not in writing, brought the number of commitals close to the four-fifths mark.

Presented with the petitions from Tuck and Rhodes, the governor lost no time in announcing that the special session would be called on August 10, and that special elections would be held August 7 to fill nine vacancies in the General Assembly, four in the senate and five in the house.

The governor's statement came after he repeatedly had expressed opposition to the special session movement.

Woll Sees Menace In Overconfidence

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Matthew Woll, president of the national labor committee for modification and repeal, predicted today the repeal of the eighteenth amendment by next January, but warned against overconfidence on the part of antiprohibitionists.

"We lost at least 50,000 repeal votes in West Virginia on Tuesday due to overconfidence alone," he said in a statement.

"Repeal of the eighteenth amendment is more important even than modification of the Volstead act. So long as the eighteenth amendment is law, there is always danger of nullifying the right to manufacture and sell wholesale beer either through legislation or judicial action."

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Arthur J. Mason, 76, engineer, inventor, agriculturist, and a cousin of the poet, Robert Browning, died yesterday.

He was born in Melbourne, Australia, and came to America in 1881. Among his inventions was machinery for unloading iron ore; for cutting and sawing coal in mines without explosives, and a process for treatment of iron ore.

TODAY MARKS DEBUT OF MANY NEW TAXES

Corporations Bear Brunt of Levies, but Individuals Also Are Hit.

(Associated Press.)

With the close of June and the end of the fiscal year today, corporations of the Nation begin a new year that brings them many new taxes.

Some of the changes carried in the industrial recovery law affect individuals, too.

The individual is denied the privilege, formerly granted, of carrying over and deducting from his income for the taxable year a net loss he had in the preceding year.

He also is denied the right to carry over losses from sale or exchange of stocks and bonds, which are not capital assets, to apply these losses toward reducing his tax on gains from similar transactions in the next taxable year.

Revival of Old Laws.

Another change requires that no part of any loss disallowed to a partnership as a deduction under the section which permitted partners to reduce their individual net incomes by their distributive share of net loss incurred by the partnership shall be allowed to a partner in computing net income. The section prohibits a partnership from deducting a net loss that is attributable to a loss from the sale or exchange of stocks or bonds which are not capital assets and to this extent would be denied the individual.

Much of the new corporation tax levy is new or a revival of similar laws of years ago.

The act levies a tax of $1 for each 1,000 of adjusted declared value of the corporation's stocks. Returns covering the stock tax and payment of the tax must be made by August 1.

Withheld From Dividends.

It imposes upon dividends to be paid to any person other than a domestic corporation an excise tax of 5 per cent, to be deducted at the source and withheld from such dividends by the payor corporation.

It imposes upon the net income of every corporation an excess profits tax equivalent to 5 per cent of such portion of its net income for each income tax year after June 30, 1933, as is in excess of 12½ per cent of the adjusted declared value of its capital stock.

It imposes an additional tax of one-fourth per cent on corporations which file consolidated net tax returns for 1934 and 1935, making the rate 14¾ per cent.

Accumulation of Earnings.

It imposes a tax on accumulation of earnings held to avoid payment of excise tax on dividends.

It removes the exemption formerly allowed private bankers for stock losses by requiring that losses from the sale of stocks and bonds which are not capital assets be applied only against gains from similar transactions and can not be used to reduce income from other sources.

The law gives the President the right to set aside any of the new taxes at the end of any year in which the Government balances its budget or when the eighteenth amendment is repealed.

Breach Is Charged To Naval Graduate

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Percival Hunter, jr., of Winnetka, was made defendant today in a $100,000 suit filed by Miss Mary Wirt, 23, a graduate nurse of Huntington, Ind.

Hunter, a graduate of Annapolis, announced his engagement recently to Miss Jane Henning, of Winnetka. He is the son of the purchasing agent for the Burlington Railroad and himself a salesman for the Union Carbide & Carbon Co.

The plaintiff's attorney said breach of promise to marry would be alleged. Miss Wirt became acquainted with Hunter, the attorney said, when she nursed him in the Government hospital at Denver.

outlined in which close observers saw evidence of the enthusiasm which President Roosevelt bears for this phase of the nation's defensive scheme.

Emphasizing fleet efficiency the document outlines plans to build up and keep up a fleet of the maximum war efficiency under the London Naval Treaty.

At the present time plans for building are in the hands of contractors who will soon make proposals to the Government for the construction of nearly two score ships, the funds to be drawn from the special appropriations of the recovery legislation. Approximately $250,000,000 will be spent in this regard, it was said at the Navy Department.

The new policy was drafted by the General Naval Board and approved by Secretary Swanson to replace the policy issued in 1931 by a Republican administration, following the London Arms Conference.

Among the new principles as compared with those in the former policy was one "to protect American lives and property." While this has been a policy of the Navy traditionally, this is the first time it has been so definitely stated.

Under its shore establishment, the Navy put emphasis on:

"To maintain a shore establishment sufficient to sustain the forces afloat in peace and capable of expansion to meet their needs in emergencies."

The new policy stresses the maintenance of the Marine Corps in sufficient strength to furnish detachments to vessels, guard shore stations and outlying possessions and "to provide expeditionary forces in immediate readiness."

Work on Memorial to Samuel Gompers Begins in July for October Dedication

Prospectus of the memorial to Samuel Gompers, first president of the American Federation of Labor, work on which will be started in a few weeks when plans for the foundation have been approved by the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks. The group will be erected between Tenth and Eleventh streets on Massachusetts avenue.

Contract Is Let for Base; Site and Plans Win U. S. Approval.

Work on new Samuel Gompers Memorial at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest will start within a few weeks in order that the group may be unveiled during the convention of the American Federation of Labor in October, it was learned yesterday.

A representative of the sculptor, Robert Aitken, of New York, was in Washington last week to let the contract for the foundation. A complete plan of the proposed work was needed by the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, and the actual start of work has been postponed until this can be furnished. The office exercises a supervision over all monuments erected on public land in the District.

The memorial, which will cost about $100,000, was planned shortly after Mr. Gompers' death several years ago. The funds for it have already been contributed by the various unions and have been drawing interest for some time. Congressional permission to erect the monument in the triangle between Tenth and Eleventh streets at Massachusetts avenue also has been procured.

Ceremonies Scheduled for Labor Convention in Autumn.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the Federation, is directing the program for the dedication.

The Fine Arts Commission, which must approve the design of all public structures, has passed on the group, H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the commission, said yesterday. The statue will show a seated figure of Mr. Gompers, with allegorical figures representing Labor in the background.

CASH STABILIZATION REPORT HERE DENIED

Acheson Says Consideration Talk Is Untrue; Postal Exchange Rates Up.

(Associated Press.)

A denial of reports that there had been any consideration of dollar stabilization since the departure of President Roosevelt on his vacation was registered yesterday by Dean Acheson, Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

After asserting that he "unhesitatingly denied" such reports, the Acting Secretary declined to discuss stabilization or the work of the World Economic Conference at London. Reports of the daily progress of the conference have been devoted wholly to budgetary matters, in view of the approaching end of the fiscal year. The new bookkeeping year for the Government begins on July 1.

While this statement was coming from Mr. Acheson, the Postoffice Department was sending word to postmasters to revise their rate of exchange on money orders to conform to new levels reached by the falling dollar.

Changing instructions issued only two weeks ago, the department informed postmasters that money orders issued in the United States for payment in Great Britain, northern Ireland, the Irish Free State and the Union of South Africa should be at the rate of $4.30 a pound. Those for payment in New Zealand must be at the rate of $3.50 a pound.

PRAIRIE HEAT WAVE MOVING EASTWARD

Rains Furnish Relief From High Temperatures in Midwestern States.

(Associated Press.)

The sun baked prairies of the "world's bread basket" were cooled last night by rains which fell over wide sections during the day.

However, the heat wave which had gripped the Middle West for several days had moved along. Temperatures were reported rising all over the East.

Rains which provided relief from heat and drought were heavy in Iowa and Missouri, 8 inches falling in some sections. About 2 inches of rain fell in parts of Minnesota and North Dakota, with showers general in Illinois and Wisconsin.

The rains, however, did little good to the parched small grain crops. Wisconsin reported that the showers had helped pastures, tobacco, corn and potatoes.

Eight inches of rain in Missouri washed out sections of railroad tracks. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was delayed en route to Chicago by a wash-out. His train backed up, detoured over another road and arrived in Chicago many hours late.

The weather man said that a high pressure area moving eastward from the Pacific was expected over the Middle West by Saturday. This will definitely end the heat wave which has sent temperature records smashing. So far this has been the hottest June on record in Chicago, regardless of the temperatures Friday, and has averaged four degrees warmer than the average July, Weather Bureau records indicated.

MARTIAL LAW CASE WILL GO TO COURT

Ousted Georgia Officials to Seek Injunction Against Military Control.

Atlanta, June 29 (A.P.).—The fight between Gov. Talmadge and two former members of the highway board over control of the State Road Department will go before a three-judge Federal court here tomorrow in a suit by the ousted commissioners asking an injunction to end martial law.

The injunction was asked by Capt. J. W. Barnett, ousted chairman of the board, and Commissioner W. C. Vereen, whose office the governor also declared abandoned when he called out the National Guard and seized control of the department by force.

Gov. Talmadge, busy with a hearing at which members of the Public Service Commission were ordered to show cause why they should not be removed from office for alleged neglect of duty, announced yesterday he could not attend the injunction hearing if the other had not been concluded, but would be represented by counsel.

Adjt. Gen. Camp and Commissioner Wilhoit, who the governor placed in charge of the department, also are defendants to the suit.

The City of Atlanta yesterday intervened, making the same allegations as set forth in the Barnett-Vereen suit and contending it was vitally interested because 25 per cent of funds allocated to the State under the public works bill must be spent in the corporate limits of municipalities. The public works fund, amounting to some $10,000,000, has been held up by the Federal Government pending the clearing up of the highway situation in Georgia.

The three Federal judges who will hear the suit are Judge E. Marvin Underwood, Judge Samuel H. Sibley of the District Court of Appeals and Judge William I. Grubb, of Birmingham.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

By GEORGE D. RILEY

WHETHER you join in the view of Ella Wheeler Wilcox:

"One ship drives east and another west.
While the self-same breezes blow;
'Tis the set of the sail, and not the gale,
That bids them where to go.

Like the wind of the air, are the ways of Fate,
As we journey along through life;
'Tis the set of the soul that decides the goal,
And not the storm or the strife."

Or whether you share the view of the rooster philosopher leaning his head disconsolately against the barn door:

"What's the use of it all?" he said sadly. "Eggs yesterday. Chickens today. Feather dusters tomorrow."

It's all a matter of mental attitude. And mental attitude, we see by a headline, is part of "relief" being given by nurses. Perhaps "new mental attitude" is what the budgeteers are attempting to give Government workers as a part of the "relief" program.

At any rate tomorrow is New Year's. It's the beginning of another fiscal year, a new hand in the New Deal. We can shuffle along with the hope that Jim Farley's slogan, "No Dismissals," at least no further dismissals, will guide other Cabinet members through to the end of this dawning fiscal year. We will not venture the greeting "Happy New Year."

* * * *

Date worth remembering: June 30, 1882—Guiteau, Garfield's assassin, hanged.

Dr. Neil E. Stevens, in charge, Plant Disease Survey, Agriculture, supplies the foreword to a survey report on disappearance of eel grass along much of the Atlantic Seaboard. The summary of observations is the work of Clarence Cotton(*), assistant biologist, Biological Survey. "This sudden and nearly complete dying out of a native plant calls to mind almost involuntarily the distruction of our native chestnut by the bark disease and is no less interesting because as yet no causal organism or condition has been discovered," says Dr. Stevens.

ALICE PAUL, in the name of the National Woman's Party, protests President Roosevelt's support to Illinois' governor backing the minimum wage law of that State.

* * * Senator Bratton, of New Mexico, stated to a delegation of women only a few weeks ago that within ten years there would be no women employed under national, State or local governments. Women who have held well-paid political or semipolitical positions are now being dismissed in order that the jobs may go to men. Why is it that the men can get them? Because men are organized politically and constantly ready to act politically in each other's interest.

"Women have been supine. They have failed to coordinate their power as they should not only for their own protection, but in order that the principles for which women stand may be embodied in our civilization."

* * * *

Now maybe you'll believe "Happy Days Are Here Again."

The most promising young man in the Cabinet is Jim Farley.

Some admirers wanted to give him three beers.

He wants to add to the stamp collection by including whisky stamps.

The bootleggers have stamped their feet in rage. Postage collect.

The most popular stamp found at the Postoffice Department today is the stamp of approval of the Hon. James A. Farley on an application for a Government job.

Smile, brother, smile. 'Tis better to say "so long" than to have to say "good-by."—C. J. S.

* * * *

In arriving at who will get the jobs, it appears to Federal workers we've interviewed, the question will be not who are Democrats, but who are the best Democrats.

THOSE congressmen and out-of-towners who picture the government clerk as going to work in his limousine, equipped with chauffeur and everything, should spend a little while at, say, Connecticut avenue and M street on any working day between 8 and 9 in the morning.

Meeting an acquaintance standing outside the Mayflower the other day, he exclaimed: "Is there a parade in town today?" "No," was the reply. "Why?" "Then where are all these people hurrying?" he asked. It was only the daily hike of the Government clerks.

Some of us are wondering who would win first prize as the government clerk who walks the farthest each day.—O. L.

"Delay of justice is injustice."

WORD was received yesterday from Dr. Frank Vinson Haler, dean of the Medical School, University of Arkansas, of his entry in the crusade to advance the case of Capt. Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, recent Navy Department employe and noted Polar explorer, scientist and inventor, who was ousted from his meager job at the age of 71 without prospects against old age.

Dr. Haler's name is the latest to be added to the already long list of champions who ask the White House to take cognizance of Capt. Baldwin's case and to which The Federal Diary gladly adds its humble endorsement.

Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, U. S. A. retired, Wednesday writing in behalf of the Washington S. A. R., asked members of that organization to assist the campaign.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd recently added his name to the roll of active friends.

This campaign for justice in Capt. Baldwin's behalf is strictly nonpartisan. Men and women of all faiths and political creeds in every section of the country still are enlisting in the crusade. They seek merely to have Capt. Baldwin, still active and keen of eye, installed in some place by presidential order where he can have the necessities of life due a man who has been of such signal service to his nation in peace and in war.

Believing that in spite of the various economies practiced at their expense, many Government employes want to see the Chicago fair, the District of Columbia Department, American Federation of Government Employes, is arranging an inexpensive tour to the event. The party will leave Washington July 21 at 4:15 p. m. on the Capitol Limited, spend Saturday and Sunday in Chicago, and return to Washington in time for office Monday. Only five hours' leave will be needed.

All Government employes are eligible to take the trip. Full information can be obtained from any lodge secretary, A. F. G. E.

Here is the fourth installment of the National Civil Service Reform League's annual report:

The Civil Service Commission.

THE President has appointed to the United States Civil Service Commission Harry B. Mitchell, of Montana, and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan, of Tennessee, in place of Gov. Campbell and Miss Dell. The selection of the new commissioners was dictated in large measure by political considerations and neither Mrs. McMillan nor Mr. Mitchell has had any particular experience in personnel work.

They are both interested, however, in the task assigned to them and fully alive to the great responsibility devolving upon the commission. The President has retained George B. Wales on the commission, and for this he is to be especially commended. Mr. Wales entered the service in the commission's office in 1892. He was made chief examiner in 1908 and in 1919 President Wilson appointed him commissioner. His extended experience and devotion to the interests of the public service are invaluable to the commission.

Although 50 years have elapsed since the enactment of the original Federal civil service act, many of the essentials of a well-rounded system of personnel administration are still lacking in the Federal service. No central agency for the management of the personnel is provided; the work is still divided among a number of independent agencies.

Promotions within the service continue to be made on no real basis of competition for merit and fitness; nor is there any proper scrutiny by the Civil Service Commission of the pay rolls of Government employes. The problem of handling such matters as separations from the service, transfers within the service, and other internal problems affecting the welfare of employes has not been adequately solved, and no practical procedure therefor has been worked out. No personnel system can be considered adequate without these essential elements. They should be provided for without further delay.

In the economies which will be attempted in the Federal Service, there is great danger that the staff of the commission will suffer unduly. There is constantly need for improving technique of testing applicants for Government positions. The commission has in the past contributed materially to the progress of the technique of examination processes through its valuable research division. It would be false economy to drop this work now when it may be accomplished with a minimum of expense.

FILE rooms are not generally interesting places for sightseeing, but circumstances can often alter a situation materially. The person in charge can be gracious, helpful and unselfish. All this is by way of indicating that Miss Bertha E. Hall(*), Animal Industry, fits well into the description. A visit to the mails and files office yesterday was especially interesting, because Miss Hall had on display two trays of Santa Clara, Calif., cherries, and she was sharing them with others. Dear Diary: Your paragraph Monday, commenting on a beauty contest to select a Miss District of Columbia to compete for the title of Miss America at Atlantic City in September, suggested that perhaps a girl in the Government service might win.

Indeed, you must have been observing some of the girls in the Department of Commerce, than whom there are no fairer, before you wrote that paragraph. Why not sponsor an independent contest through the Diary to select a number of girls to represent the Government workers in the District-wide contest.—The Old Bachelor.

Gerard Urges Solvay & Cie., to Turn Over American Holdings.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—A new chapter in the controversy between the Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation and the stockholders commitee, which is seeking to elect several new directors, was contributed today by James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, and a stockholder in the company.

Gerard, in a statement, proposed that the stockholders' committee, which represents certain minority Allied Chemical holdings, including those of Solvay & Cie., Belgian chemical combine, prevail upon the Solvay organization to turn over its American holdings in Allied to the Belgian government in return for Belgian bonds, and then have the Belgian government offer these holdings to the United States Government in part payment of its war debt.

Gerard originally opposed the company in its conflict with the New York Stock Exchange on the matter of adequate financial statements, but has lined up with the Allied management in its dispute with the stockholders' committee.

DEATH OF ARBUCKLE ENDS HIS COMEBACK

Screen Comedian, Exiled 10 Years, Had Just Signed New Contract.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's progress along the "comeback trail," after he had plunged more than a decade ago from the height of stardom as a screen comedian, was cut short by death early today.

The plump, jolly "Fatty," who became an exile from the movies after his acquittal in the mysterious death of Virginia Rappe, screen actress, died in his sleep of a heart attack. He was 45.

Only a few hours earlier he had signed a contract with Warner Bros. that meant his permanent return to the screen.

He had finished, yesterday afternoon, the sixth of a series of short comedies designed to test whether he could regain the favor of the millions who once laughed at his contagious chuckle, his tiny derby, and his voluminous, ill-fitting trousers.

Then he and his third wife, formerly Addie McPhail, attended a party in honor of their first wedding anniversary. His manager, Joseph Riskin; Johnny Dundee, former boxer, and Johnny Walker were among the guests.

The comedian's body was taken this afternoon to a Broadway funeral church and placed in the gold room, where crowds fought seven years ago to pass the bier of Rudolph Valentino.

Precautions were taken against a similar crush, and the line that filed past the coffin was orderly. The body will remain on view until the funeral at 1 p. m. Saturday, which will be in charge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Cremation will follow.

Roosevelt Cheered as Ship Arrives in Campobello Bay

Friends of Boyhood Days Greet President at End of Vacation Cruise; Davis Accompanies Him Into Harbor.

Campobello Island, N. B., June 29 (A.P.).—Welcomed heartily back to his boyhood playground on this Canadian island late today, President Roosevelt pointed the struggling Geneva arms parley to the friendship of Canada and the United States as an example of an unfortified border.

Mr. Roosevelt fought it out with an unrelenting fog for a five-hour run up the rocky coast of Maine today to cap his adventurous vacation at sea.

Smiling over his victory with the elements, the tanned President went ashore amid the cheers of his old friends and neighbors late in the afternoon and spoke to them briefly before going to the family home.

Glad Davis Along.

"I am glad I had with me," he said, "the chairman of the American delegation to the Geneva arms conference, Mr. Norman H. Davis. Now, he can go back and tell them over there that he has seen with his own eyes what a border without fortification means between two great nations.

"I was thinking also as I came along that this reception is the finest example of permanent friendship between nations that we could possibly have."

The vacationing President put in one of his most venturesome days at sea today to win his destination over a fog that had held him four nights and three days at Lakemans Bay, Roque Island.

Dodging past the menacing cliffs of West Quoddy Head, he turned true into the Quoddy Roads leading to Eastport, Me., and his home port, after five hours in the densest of fogs.

As if admitting defeat, the fog ducked out to sea before a stiff northwest wind and the home harbor was lighted up in the glory of a June afternoon's sunshine.

Receives Real Welcome.

Pointing through Lubec Narrows with all sails hoisted, he sailed slowly past a real welcome from both shores. Passing the cruiser Indianapolis with its rails manned, he received the booming Presidential salute.

Saturday he will board this newest of the ships in the American fleet for a speed trial run back to the Capital and the war on the emergency.

Mr. Roosevelt, before returning to Campobello Harbor, cruised past the wharves at Eastport, Me., to wave to the cheering hosts of that city. Turning back, he reviewed a marine parade and then darted into Campobello, directly across the bay from Eastport. There he left the sea-going Amberjack II for the first time since he boarded her 12 days ago at Marion, Mass., for the sail up the Atlantic which encountered every kind of weather. Driven to the Campobello Yacht Club, the President, who was joined here by Mrs. Roosevelt, stopped to shake hands with old friends and then after receiving a welcoming speech from John F. Calder, president of the Board of Trade, he replied briefly.

Norman H. Davis accompanied the President on his hazardous run through the fog today from Lakemans Bay, and departed tonight for Boston.

Washington State Repeal Fight Near

Olympic, Wash., June 29 (A.P.).—Washington's impending battle over prohibition repeal officially starts tomorrow, with the opening of the filing period for delegates to the State convention. Ninety-nine delegates from 46 legislative districts will be elected August 29, and the convention will begin October 3.

All candidates for delegates must file declarations either for or against repeal. The filing fee is $10. The filing period will close Sunday, July 30.

The State's three larger counties—King, Spokane and Pierce—will elect 44 of the delegates. These counties were among the 25 counties which gave majorities in favor of repeal of the State bone dry laws at the 1932 general election. At that time the State voted for repeal 341,450 to 208,211.

Man Held in Theft Of $20,000 Stocks

San Diego, Calif., June 29 (A.P.).—Charles Gilsten, alias Charles Gregory, 33, was held here today while Chief of Police Harry Raymond communicated with New York officials concerning $20,000 in allegedly stolen securities found on him.

"We are not sure where the stocks came from," Raymond said, "but we have positive information that they are stolen, probably in a recent New York stickup."

Gilsten told police, they said, that he won the stocks in a dice game, admitting he knew they were stolen. The man was arrested near an airport.

ARMS PARLEY QUITS UNTIL NEXT AUTUMN

Reich Envoy Calls Recess First-Class Funeral of Conference.

Geneva, June 29 (A.P.).—The world Disarmament Conference met long enough today to approve plans for private conversations among governments through the summer and adjournment until October 16.

The adjournment for three and a half months was approved despite protests by Rudolf Nadolny, Germany's representative, that the long recess provided a first-class funeral for disarmament and that private conversations would be fruitless.

The Hungarian representative supported him, but Rene Massigli, speaking for France, said all depended on whether the governments participated in private conversations in a spirit of collaboration and peace.

Herr Nadolny insisted the best method to solve the difficulties facing the conference was to continue sessions at Geneva without interruption.

"People of the world will never understand this adjournment—why, after 17 months' labor, we are unable to reach an accord," he said. "I won't refer to disarmed nations who for 14 years have awaited others to honor their promises to disarm and establish national security. Adjournment will be interpreted as abandonment."

Hugh Wilson, speaking for the United States, pledged the help of his country in private negotiations.

"Hispaniola" Is Revived As Indies Island Name

(Associated Press.)

Hispaniola is back on the map again. The name has been revived with formal sanction of the United States Geographic Board—the last court on geographic applications—for the Caribbean Island which comprises the republics of Haiti and Santo Domingo.

After Columbus discovered the island in 1492 he named it "La Isla Espanola," or the Spanish Island, which Latinized as Hispaniola was used widely from 1850 to 1850. The board explained in announcing its decision yesterday there had been considerable confusion as to the proper designation of the whole Island, with the Dominicans calling the entire area "La Isla de Santo Domingo," and the Haitians on the other end terming it "Haiti."

The new designation will be employed by all United States Government publications, by map makers in this country and doubtless by the British as well.

Clevelander Cleared in Killing.

Alexandria, La., June 29 (A.P.).—Anthony Velotta, 27, of Cleveland, Ohio, was acquitted by a District Court jury today of a charge of slaying Earl Miller, 21, of Alexandria, at the entrance of an amusement club here last December 24.

HOARDERS' RETURN OF GOLD DECLINING

18 Turn Over $18,371 to U. S. This Week; Names May Be Published.

Hoarded gold collections made by agents of the Department of Justice amounted to only $18,371, it was announced yesterday by the department.

Only 18 persons returned gold on demand of the agents, and the average amount was a little over $1,000, although previous average returns have ranged from $1,900 to $4,500. Ten persons refused to return gold valued at $24,450. It was reported that 3,780 persons claim they had already returned gold valued at $24,125,298 before being visited by the agents.

The names of nearly all suspected gold hoarders have been sent to the Justice Department by the Treasury Department, Attorney General Cummings said. There may still be one small list to be transmitted. When all suspects have been investigated, the names of those refusing to return gold may be made public before prosecution is started, he said.

Both House and Senate committees have asked for help of the Department of Justice in investigating alleged "receivership rackets," the Attorney General said. The House committee asked for statistical data on receiverships in New York, while the Senate committee wanted similar information for southern California, he reported.

ROUGH HANDS

do not belong to those whose automobiles are accepted by us as part payment on new Packard Cars—

come from those who are considerate of their motor transportation. They are the class who not only take as much pride in the appearance of their equippage as they do in their personal dress, but know that from a dollar and cents standpoint—a "down at the heel" automobile depreciates very rapidly.

Their cars are traded in long before their serviceable mileage is used up—because their owners find need for a different or later model. Such cars, once we have accepted them in trade, are put through our service department, thoroughly checked, necessary adjustments made, re-tired and refinished if necessary—then they are offered for sale—at prices that are equal if not lower than you would pay for the average used car.

Furthermore—we think so much of our Packardized used cars that at all times they are kept under cover—we do not set our sale merchandise out on a lot where it is subject to the action of the elements.

Being out of the high rent district we are able to price our automobiles as low if not lower than cars of comparable quality.

More than ten years of used car merchandising, during which time we have made more than 5,000 customer friends, is the strongest guarantee you can have as to the quality of Packardized Used Cars.

Why not enjoy the pleasure of driving one of these cars over the holiday?

Rotary Clubs Kill Governing Change

Boston, June 29 (A.P.).—Proposals by the Oklahoma City Rotary Club for study of the advisability of a more decentralized form of Rotary government were killed here today by the fourth plenary session of the twenty-fourth annual convention of Rotary International.

Two resolutions were put before the convention by the Oklahoma Club, one seeking reexamination for the whole question of a more autonomous form of government in national areas, and a second providing for direct election of district governors. Both brought spirited debate.

Earlier in the session the convention directed its general officers to cable an expression of its best wishes for success to the London Economic Conference, while, through another resolution, it authorized the directorate to further its program for world amity by considering the question of a world conference to choose an auxiliary language for international usage.

Warning!

Fireworks Are Dangerous! Parents Told to Guard Children Tuesday.

Fire Chief George S. Watson yesterday issued his perennial appeal for a safe and sane Fourth of July. Declaring that "the world's worst enemy—fire—presents 'the dark side' of Independence Day," Chief Watson said:

"The Fourth of July losses and injuries are caused chiefly by carelessness. It is natural for children to be careless, and if parents are careless enough to allow children to have firecrackers and certain dangerous fireworks, then physical injuries and property damage will surely follow.

"Unfortunately, fireworks do not confine injury to the person who is playing with them, but a carelessly thrown missile may strike some innocent bystander who is entirely unaware of the danger he is in. While the firecracker that does the damage may be thrown by a child, the blame most surely must rest on the shoulders of the parents who do not warn their children of the danger."

NO PLACE FOR POLITICS.

General Hugh Johnson is confronted with the exceedingly difficult task of building up a business organization to administer the national industrial recovery act. The extent to which he is able to do so will determine, in large measure, the effectiveness of this agency in bringing about better economic conditions. The nature of the task which has been undertaken requires such a high degree of impartiality and aloofness from politics that the selection of a staff becomes a most important problem.

One of the greatest dangers in a venture of this kind is that political influence will creep into the administration of an act intended for the benefit of the whole country. When business interests in any State encounter difficulties under the recovery act they may be expected to appeal to their congressmen and senators. These legislators in turn may be expected to take up the problems involved with the administrators of the act. Such contacts can not be avoided when the Government undertakes supervisory powers over industry.

If jobs are awarded on a patronage basis at the behest of congressmen and if those same members of Congress undertake to secure favorable treatment for industries of their respective districts, the door to political influence will be open. Under such circumstances it would be extremely difficult for any general director to keep the administration of the act in its many ramifications on a strictly impartial basis.

To some extent this difficulty might be overcome by the transfer of Civil Service employees who are being released from other departments to this and other new agencies. A trained personnel accustomed to rendering service impartially would help to remove administration of the recovery act from any suspicion of political influence. The dispensers of patronage ought to realize the difficult situation in which the administrators of this vitally important measure are being placed.

THE FIREMEN'S PARADE.

The firemen of Washington and neighboring cities and towns are not to be disappointed this year by abandonment of the usual parade on Labor Day.

They have joined with enthusiasm in making this event more important and attractive each successive year. The parade is now a visual demonstration of the efficiency of modern fire-fighters, and as such commands public admiration. But it is more: it is an inspiration to the firemen of many communities, enabling them to compare notes and learn the latest ideas and inventions relating to fire prevention. Visiting fire companies combine vacation pleasures of their Washington visit with earnest study of equipment, methods of fire-fighting, and organization in general.

As for the public, it revels in the parade. The tens of thousands of visitors who make Labor Day and the Firemen's Parade a legitimate excuse for a trip to the National Capital are richly repaid. With many bands, gorgeous apparatus of all kinds, unique contrasts between old and new devices, and the sights and sounds attending a display of fire-fighting forces, the annual parade has become a fixture in the calendar which can not be permitted to disappear.

DISTRICT TAX RETURNS.

A warning has been issued by the District tax assessor to all residents of Washington having taxable property that a return must be made during July. Blanks for filing returns are being distributed in the residential sections as well as in downtown offices. The assessor is anxious to notify all taxpayers of the penalties for failure to make returns during the coming month.

Citizens of the District have paid $27,230 in penalties this year for failure to file returns. Similar penalties will be added to belated tax returns this year, and in addition the Commissioners intend to bring legal proceedings against any person failing to file a return. Special efforts are being made to get blanks for filing returns into the hands of all newcomers, but the responsibility for reporting their property holdings to the assessor's office falls entirely upon them.

For a number of years the District's system of taxing personal property was weak and easily evaded. A change in the law now requires all persons with taxable property to file a return each July. No evasion of this responsibility is possible by acceptance of a tentative assessment. No one may escape the personal property tax without subjecting himself to the possibility of court proceedings and severe penalties.

Payment of taxes is a civic responsibility. It is well that the Commissioners are tightening up on the enforcement of the local tax law. When some citizens are allowed to escape their tax obligations a greater burden is thrown upon other taxpayers who comply with the law. The District government owes to all citizens contributing to its support a duty to enforce the tax laws against every would-be evader.

DOLLAR WHEAT VS. CONTROL.

A curious situation has arisen in connection with the processing tax on wheat announced by the Department of Agriculture. A tax of 30 cents per bushel on wheat milling will become effective on July 9 for the purpose of raising wheat prices to the pre-war level. Indications are that the department based its order on prices during the month from May 15 to June 15. Since that time wheat prices have increased about 40 cents per bushel. The question arises whether dollar wheat meets the requirements of the act without the levying of a processing tax.

The average price of wheat during the so-called base period from August, 1909, to July, 1914, was 88.4 cents. This is the price on the farm, which is not comparable with the price on the grain exchanges. Nevertheless, current prices in the Chicago grain pit suggest that the objective of the agricultural adjustment act has been very nearly attained, so far as wheat is concerned.

Congress apparently did not contemplate the boosting of wheat prices above the 1909-14 level. Its purpose was to restore prices that will give farmers purchasing power comparable to that which they had in the pre-war period. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to proclaim only such taxes as are needed to equal the difference between the "current average farm price" of wheat and its so-called fair exchange value as ascertained by the relationship between wheat and other commodity prices before the war. The secretary is instructed to adjust the amount of the tax at intervals to prevent the collection of more or less money than is needed to effectuate the policy laid down by Congress.

Unless there is a reaction in the price of wheat, therefore, it appears that the department may be called upon to adjust the tax at an early date. This year's wheat crop in the United States is unusually small. The Department of Agriculture expects the yield of winter wheat to be the smallest since 1904. It is estimated that it will amount to only about 56 per cent of the 1931 crop. For the first time in many years the output of American wheat may be less than the domestic demand. Such prospects of reducing the large carryover from former years are very encouraging to both farmers and grain dealers.

It remains to be seen whether wheat growers, seeing visions of the new high prices and fearing that the benefits from the domestic allotment plan may not amount to much under present conditions, will agree to limit their acreage by as much as 20 per cent in 1934 and 1935 at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture.

INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS.

The difficulties which are encountered in every attempt to work out economic problems on an international basis are brought into bold relief by the World Economic Conference. Many of the governments that have sent delegations to London already have put into effect domestic programs which are designed to improve economic conditions. The statesmen at London hesitate to accept any international remedy that may interfere with domestic measures. Reconciliation of international policies with many conflicting national objectives becomes a tremendous task.

Since the World War the tendency has been toward the development of national economic units, which has resulted in great disparity of living conditions in different countries and on different continents. Before the war there was a reasonable degree of economic balance between the chief industrial countries and competition among them was keen.

But the war brought far-reaching changes. Vast new industrial plants were built up and agriculture in the neutral countries was greatly extended to meet the demands of war-torn Europe. When the war was over new countries were carved out of crumbling empires, each trying to be self-contained. Monetary systems were in chaos. Many countries, including the United States, raised tariff duties to prevent the influx of cheap goods from countries having depreciated currencies. Economic systems the world over were in derangement, and each country took measures within its power to control the situation. As the post-war depression lifted many governments decided to maintain their nationalistic policies in an effort to strengthen their resistance to possible future attack.

The tendency toward economic nationalism was again given impetus by the depression of the last three years. Nations felt compelled to protect themselves against depreciated currencies, cut-throat foreign competition, and adverse trade balances. Some governments raised tariffs to preserve their credit as well as to protect home enterprise.

Efforts are being made at London to revive the international outlook upon trade and finance. But no government likes to give up those regulations by which it hopes to put or keep its own economic house in order. A measure of control over the production or distribution of goods is being established in many countries, either by governments or industrial management. Control of this kind is practicable only within national boundaries. Hence, assurance is demanded that the equilibrium sought by each country will not be upset by foreign producers operating without restrictions in an effort to increase their export markets for cheap goods.

In view of these conditions some observers have changed their attitude of long standing on the question of international free trade. Probably the most notable example is that of J. Maynard Keynes, former exponent of free trade among nations. Now Mr. Keynes is advising "a greater measure of national self-sufficiency and economic isolation among countries" to serve the ends of both peace and prosperity.

Conditions frequently alter or destroy theories. Practical statesmen must deal with the world as they find it, and not according to pre-conceived ideas as to what conditions should be. To disregard the economic disparities between nations would be as foolish as to assume that any nation could prosper ultimately without importing commodities which it lacks and exporting surplus commodities to pay for them. American enterprise can not compete on an equal basis with coolie-produced raw materials or manufactured goods, but the United States does need such imports as rubber, tin, coffee, tea, silk, &c. Likewise the world needs American cotton, tobacco and various manufactured products.

STABILITY OF CROPS.

A correspondent of The Post, commenting upon the wholesale poisoning of grasshoppers in the northwest, asked why pests should be disturbed in their work of reducing the agricultural surplus. It happens that this question is answered indirectly by Dr. William A. Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, in an article in the Scientific Monthly for July. He deals, however, with plant diseases instead of insect pests. The question he directly answers is this: "Why not discontinue work upon the control of plant diseases and allow the ravages of these diseases to at least partially solve the problem of overproduction?"

The losses from plant diseases, replies Dr. Taylor, unfortunately fall unequally upon the producing public. "An epidemic will affect only certain irregular areas, causing heavy damage to individuals farming there, the curtailment in production perhaps temporarily benefitting other regions. From the standpoint of the nation such irregularity of production is objectionable, because it not only injures or bankrupts certain groups of people, but it increases the average cost of production for the entire country; it is not a cure for overproduction."

Lowered quality, lowered efficiency of production, and eventual overproduction would be the effects of abandonment of control of plant diseases. Having no knowledge of the extent of plant disease ravages, a greater acreage would be planted by farmers in expectation of a shortage resulting from wide ravages elsewhere. Overproduction would not only be probable, but the surpluses would be unpredictable.

"Better adjustment of production to demand obviously must rest upon a steady basis of production," concludes Dr. Taylor. Of even greater importance is the question of quality as related to stabilization of production. Costs of production are reduced by using better crop plants, while improving quality and insuring a steady yield. The most dependable results can be obtained only by improving plants and controlling disease. Better adjustment of supply to demand can be attained when a steady yield of reliable quality is insured by superior plants and control of disease.

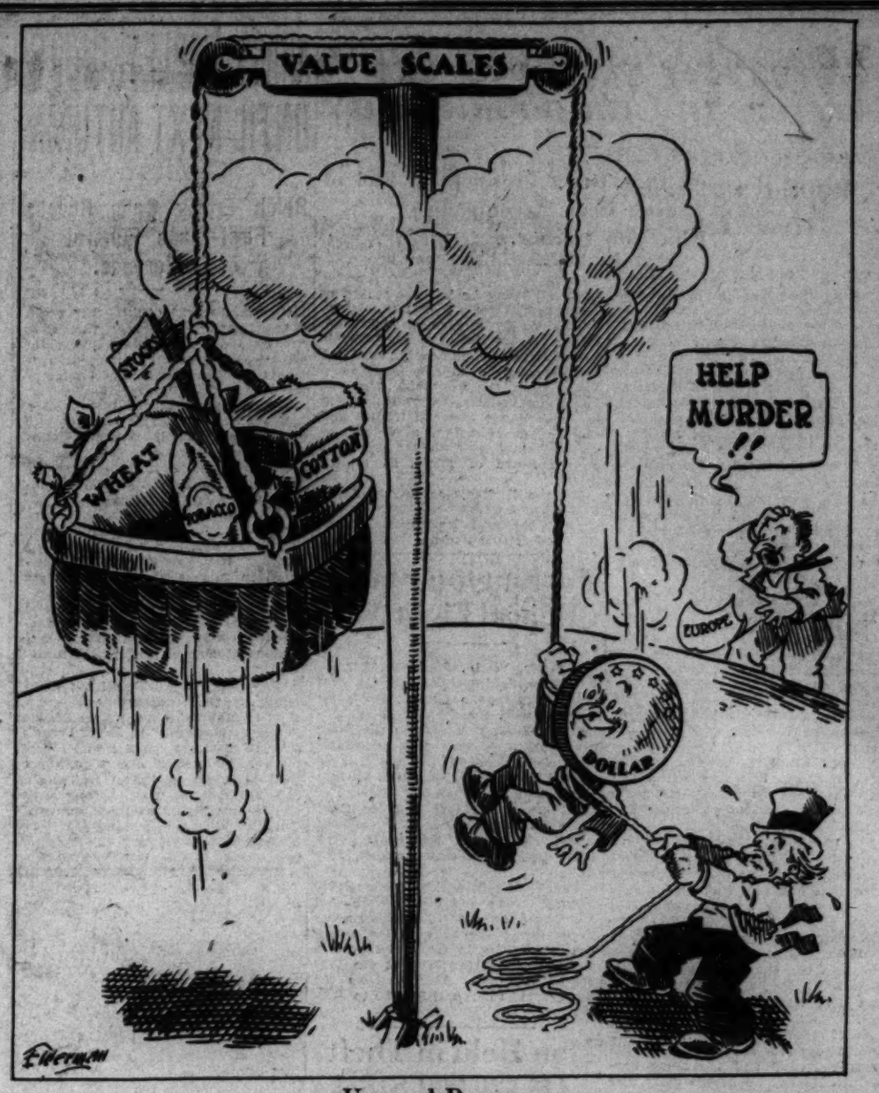
VACATIONS

By Nomad, in the Boston Transcript.

How our ancestors got along without vacations is inexplicable, but it does not appear from their correspondence or the records of our grandfathers that they had them. Presidents, governors, functionaries of all sorts apparently stuck to their posts, at Washington or elsewhere, through the summer months, without any thought of withdrawing to some cool seashore or mountain resort for a period of relief from heated labors. Washington and Jefferson were, as Presidents, near their homes, but there is no evidence that they returned to them for rest from their official labors until their terms of office were over.

As nearly as the Listener can determine, the custom of going on vacations in summer did not become common in this country until nearly the middle of the nineteenth century. Then people who had never had vacations began to get them as a matter of custom and even of necessity. And, as a rule, they began seeking these periods of repose or coolness at or near their birthplaces or the homes of their youth. As a matter of habit or custom, when people began to take vacations they seem to have resorted to their native or home district, and this was as common in Europe as it was in America. For your vacation, your holiday, your villegiatura, you went to your "pays," your homeland. Cham—or was it Herriot?—had a pathetic cartoon in a Paris paper in which, in a day of heat, one Parisian is shown asking another, "I suppose you are about starting for your holiday in your pays?" "Alas!" responds the other, "I have no pays—I was born in Paris!" There were Bostonians like that. If you were a Vermonter, or a New Hampshire or Maine man, you went for your vacation to Vermont, or New Hampshire, or Maine, as a matter of course, and probably you still do. But if you hadn't the luck to be born in any one of these pleasant places, you chose some other, and got along well enough—though in all probability there is no place so delightful in which to spend a vacation as the place where you were born. "How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood!"

Ever since people were civilized at all they have been more or less given to tourism, and to going on pilgrimages. We read that in the days of ancient Rome the inhabitants of Spain were much given to going on tours to the capital, and no doubt the Romans themselves were in the habit of making visits of inspection or curiosity to the outlying parts of the empire. There were Cook's tours to Marsalia and Italica. And countless Romans made tours of reverent interest to Athens. When the Roman empire declined, the days of religious pilgrimage arrived. Religious tours became so common that orders of knighthood had to be formed to take care of the pilgrims. Pilgrims were really the first tourists—and now the tourists are becoming the pilgrims once more—some of them inspired by faith, but more, probably, by curiosity. Our restless earth can not be so interesting as it must have been in the days of ancient Rome, and of Herculaneum and Pompeii, but it is at least easier to get about, and we have a lot more vacation travel, probably, than they had in the days when the Knights Hospitallers took care of the pilgrims.



Ups and Downs.

POST HASTE.

Every industry now must have lieutenants here to translate its code for Gen. Johnson and transmit his orders; and does that make the owners of Washington office buildings mad?

Reports from London indicate that Prof. Tugwell is also needed at the wheat parley.

Secretary Wallace threatens us with prosperity twice as serious as that of 1929, but he may get a second term and have more crops destroyed.

It seems to be an answer to that dictatorship talk that despite the absence of the chief and the heads of legislative, State and brain trust departments, the Government still runs.

Speaking of remarkable situations, Prof. Moley found it necessary in London to give public assurance that he still recognized the authority of his chief, the Secretary of State.

Before the summer is over competition between travel boosters is going to make a visit to the Chicago world fair cheaper than staying at home.

After all but 20 per cent of the 20-cent franc has been lost, M. Bonnet realizes that the "French pheasants will begin singing the mayonnaise" if attempt is made to slice off any more.

Slow taxpayers must have a distorted idea that they have as much right to wait and pay with a cheap dollar as the farmer with a mortgage.

How long must we hold our breath before Prof. Moley reveals the secret of his precipitate trip to London?

Fancy charges for mountain camps are making vacationists jealous of the foresters, who are being paid for living in theirs.

The continued fog surrounding the Amberjack was nature's attempt to duplicate London conference conditions.

Secretary Wallace promises Kansas $20,000,000 this fall for its crop failure, and he is saved the bother of taking it over.

France can't quite understand why we laugh at the paid propaganda about her good points, but gets some consolation from our publication of all the bad stuff about Germany without charge. PAUL HUDSON.

JUST FOLKS

GOLF.

Golf is a game at which men play
When they have put their cares away;
A game beneath the open sky,
Where beauty dwells, and yet they sigh
And let their spirits droop and fall
Because they hook or slice the ball.

Golf is a game by men designed
To rest the body and the mind.
'Tis played in air that's sweet and clean,
On turf that's velvet soft and green,
Yet all of nature's charm can not
Make up for one shanked mashie shot.

Golf is a game, a five-mile trip
Enriched by glorious fellowship;
A journey over hill and dale,
Where bird and blossom never fail
And all men should be happy, but
They grieve because they miss a putt.

Golf is a game! Its courses fair
Lie far away from strife and care.
Yet look at golfers as they play,
Their faces lined with deep dismay;
Sad victims of a cruel fate
Because their brassie shots aren't straight.

Columbus Didn't Discover a New World Until He Discarded an Old Idea.

By Robert Quillen

TO those who are blessed with imagination, the Russian experiment seems one of the greatest and most enviable adventures in human history. No other people has dared to discard a civilization and begin again at scratch.

Whether the experiment is right or wrong, the mental attitude that made it possible is the sign and heritage and peculiar equipment of those who are destined to lead the world.

Since all progress is necessarily a matter of omitting old ways and adopting new, the first essential of leadership is a sublime indifference to precedent.

Ordinary people love a rut for its own sake. Whatever their handicap may be called—whether inertia or timidity or indifference or mental laziness—they are chained by it to familiar ways. Old methods seem right because they are old. To question their perfection is sacrilege.

If all people were like that, the race would still be living in trees—if ever it lived in trees.

But those equipped and destined to lead are unawed by the status quo. When they measure the worth of human institutions, they make no allowance for age or previous service. Every tub must stand on its own bottom. Every precedent must prove its worth.

In the immediate future the world will need leaders as never before. And the young people now being groomed for leadership are those who have the mental attitude of a scientist.

They do not accept new ideas merely because they are new. They do not reject old ideas merely because they are old. They do not advocate change for the sake of change.

They sit in judgment on the ways of mankind, without bias or prejudice, and decide each case on its merits. If a method or an institution is good, support it regardless of its age or its newness; if it is bad, discard it despite the enthusiasm of liberals or the moans of conservatives.

A bad system is defended only by those it fattens. Others endure it in hopeless resignation as they endure bad weather, because custom has made it seem natural and inevitable. It doesn't occur to them that any other system is possible.

If you were empowered to wipe the slate clean and plan a new civilization, it isn't probable that you would retain much of the present scheme unchanged.

If some part of our system isn't worthy to be adopted in a new order, why continue to endure it in the old? Never yet has the race made progress by unquestioning loyalty to custom.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Civil Service Rule Evaded.

Minneapolis Journal.

Civil Service rules for the appointment of postmasters are being nullified by the Roosevelt administration. Changes are made without a list of eligibles.

The device is simple and obvious. The Government just names an "acting postmaster."

The Civil Service rules provide that examiners shall pass on the applicants for a postoffice and rate them according to their fitness for the place. The three standing highest are certified, and the appointment is made from this list.

Whether the administration intends to abolish the rule is uncertain, but it may as well be abolished, if acting postmasters are to be named first. Possession is said to be nine points of the law, but in the case of a postal appointment it comes nearer being ten points. Examiners naturally would give preference to the one in charge of the office, if his record is good. Once on the eligible list, the choice of the administration, which means the choice of the party chiefs, would be sure to get the regular appointment.

Nonpartisan Jobs.

Brooklyn Eagle.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt has seemed to be, and we believe he is, a devoted champion of the merit system. We can not picture him as snapping his fingers at the spirit and purpose of the civil service law.

In so far as compatible with quick efficiency, the merit system ought to prevail in filling new jobs and old. In other words, Republicans or men without party affiliation should have equal treatment as applicants with the members of the President's own party. Any other sort of distribution of emergency legislation patronage would be peanut politics in the eyes of America and of the world.

Librarian Hoover.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Our Presidents have occupied themselves variously after leaving office—writing for newspapers and magazines, engaging in insurance, banking and other business, teaching law, serving in public offices or simply in fishing. Now, for the first time, we are to have an ex-presidential librarian. Herbert Hoover, it is announced, will take charge of the collection of World War source materials he has gathered and presented to Leland Stanford University. From what the public knows of the Hoover character, he will not make of his new work a sinecure or a pastime. There are deep and unknown diplomatic shoals to be plumbed in determining the war's origins, and the labor of arranging and publishing the various documents may flash some illumination into the depths. It is altogether fitting that a man who helped make history should now assist the historians in recording it.

RECOVERY PROBLEMS.

The most difficult step in the Government's plan to regulate business will come when it tries to make some business men understand that a "code" is not something you get from sitting in a draft and that "ethics" isn't a town on the Connecticut River.

Under the retail dry goods merchants' code so many elements of competition are ruled unclubby that it seems likely the only thing one merchant can claim over the other is sex appeal.

WELL?

"Parliaments no longer express the will of the people," declares Herr Hitler. A dictator who abolishes all minority parties does, obviously.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

American Eagle Misrepresented in Sculpture and on Coins—Why Not Stick to Nature?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much interest in your issue of Sunday the letter regarding the Bald Eagle as our national emblem, and then made a trip to the Zoo to see a live bird and compare him with what we see on our coins, and elsewhere, as the emblem of our country. A few hours previously I had crossed the new Memorial Bridge, where I noted that those decorative figures are not eagles, certainly not American birds, but have heads that are at least half dragon; and the wings are raised as though preparing to make or resist an attack. A real eagle at rest would be the more natural pose, since the structure symbolizes a restored brotherhood of the sections once in conflict.

Above all, the gates at Arlington should be decorated with the eagle at rest, standing as a silent sentinel of that "bivouac" of our national heros, where repose rather than action should be emphasized.

It seems that for nearly 150 years we have been misrepresented to the world by our emblem and that the spurious bird should be replaced by the American eagle, the authorized emblem, on our coins, on at least one of our postage stamps, and that his proud figure should appear on all our paper currency, bonds and public documents of every nature; else why have an emblem at all?

Officers in Army, Navy and other important departments of the Government express themselves as "in fullest sympathy" with any effort to bring about such a desirable change. In a letter some weeks since Mr. Morse stated that the actual cost to the Nation would be trivial, so that the item of expense need not bar the progress of this idea with Congress.

Julia Matheson Bride At Garden Wedding.

The beautiful gardens of Wellington, the Virginia home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, were the scene yesterday afternoon of the wedding of their daughter, Miss Julia Torrey Matheson, and Mr. William Potter Arnold, son of Col. and Mrs. Davis Gorham Arnold. The ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. William Jackson Morton, rector of old Christ Church, in Alexandria, in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends.

The bright green of the foliage and the brilliant colors of the many summer flowers in bloom made a fitting setting for the "white" wedding party, which passed from the house across the lawns to an improvised altar, where the ceremony was performed.

The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of heavy white satin fashioned on princess lines with a long, circular train and fitted sleeves. The veil of several layers of tulle extended in cloudy masses beyond the train. The bride carried an arm bouquet of gardenias and lillies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Matheson was maid of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids included another sister, Miss Lucy Matheson; Miss Jane Culbertson, Miss Julia Culbertson, cousins of the bride from Miami, Fla.; Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Miss Alice Fleming and Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, of Haverhill, Mass. Little Delight Wood was flower girl. All the attendants wore frocks of white mousseline de sole fashioned with long, full skirts ending in brief trains. Ruffled capes formed the wide shoulder line, and their large hats were of white organdy with shallow crowns. They all carried arm bouquets of yellow roses. The flower girl wore a frock of white organdy fashioned on modified lines of the other attendants' frocks.

Mr. Douglas MacArthur was best man for Mr. Arnold, and the ushers were Mr. Eugene Carusi, Mr. Charles McGuire, Mr. Kent Legg and Mr. Malcolm Matheson, jr., brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony there was a reception, after which Mr. Arnold and his bride left for a wedding trip. They will make their home in Washington on their return.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Lucy H. Culbertson, of Miami, grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Willis D. Wood, of Huntington, Long Island, and Mrs. John Hopkins, of Charlottesville, Va.

Imogene Hitch to Be Bride Of Donald R. Hyland.

Mrs. Helen Hitch, of Laurel, Del., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Imogene Hitch, to Mr. Donald R. Hyland, son of Dr. and Mrs. G. M. Hyland, of Washington, brother of Senora de Abelli, wife of the former Minister of Bolivia.

The wedding will take place on July 8, at the home of the bride, in Laurel, and will include only members of the family. MICHIGAN SEEKING TO REOPEN BANKS

Attorney General Appeals to Roosevelt for Interview on Detroit Situation.

Detroit, June 29 (A.P.).—Michigan's attorney general tonight appealed to President Roosevelt for a personal interview, at which he hopes to place before the Chief Executive reasons why he believes two closed national banks in Detroit should be reopened.

Decision to make the appeal was reached by Attorney General Patrick H. O. O'Brien, after he had failed to obtain from the Federal receivers of the two banks the testimony he sought before the one-man grand jury now conducting hearings into the closings.

The receivers, B. C. Scham, for the closed Guardian National Bank of Commerce, and C. O. Thomas, for the closed First National Bank of Detroit, refused to be sworn in after they had been subpenaed to appear before the jury today. Their attorneys said the jury has no jurisdiction in the matter of national banks.

In a lengthy telegram to the President, O'Brien cited the refusal of the receivers to testify, urged the prompt reopening of the banks, and asked for a personal hearing at which he could lay his case before the President. Witnesses before the jury, he said, have charged that the Government was responsible for closing the banks, although testifying they are solvent today and could reopen with "reasonable assistance from Federal authorities." Appeals to the Comptroller of the Currency and to the Treasury Department, he said, have been fruitless.

Heat Even Drives Three Dogs Mad

This heat is enough to drive one mad. And it did—three of 'em—all dogs.

Frightened residents in the Northwest section yesterday kept police on the jump. First, on Ingraham street, near Georgia avenue northwest. Responding coppers chased one of "man's best friends," but lost him in the shuffle. Next, several blocks away, on Warder street, citizens scampered for safety as another dog started to run in circles.

This canine fared not so well. He was pursued to Lamont street and shot dead by Policeman J. H. Johnson, of the Tenth Precinct.

A third call in the 1300 block of East Capitol street resulted in another chase, but no capture. Incidentally Fido must have a muzzle by Saturday or go to the pound.

A Walk Out

Two Men Are Fitted With New Shoes, Then Rob Store of $25.

After being fitted with shoes, two robbers last night forced Walter B. Morton, manager of a shoe store at 3144 M street northwest, into a rear room at gun-point, trussed him with towels and then rifled the cash register of about $25.

Morton, who lives at 618 H street southeast, was alone in the store when the men entered. Both said they wanted shoes. They were fitted to their satisfaction, and both said they would "wear them." Suddenly one of them whipped out a revolver and forced Morton to do their bidding.

Although the store manager had considerable money in his pockets and wore an expensive wrist watch, the robbers calmly informed him he need have no fear for his property.

"We don't want your money," one of them said. "We only want what belongs to the store company."

The men walked from the store in their new shoes, leaving their old ones behind, and escaped in an automobile.

Louis Monroe Spent Years Gathering Material on Great Chancellor.

Lord Henry Brougham, lord chancellor of Great Britain from 1830 to 1834, never heard of Louis Monroe, colored, aged 58, who retires today after serving the Board of Education as messenger and clerk for 42 years.

Nevertheless, Louis, as he is known to hundreds in the District public school system, is to become prominently identified with the famous British barrister. He plans to devote the remainder of his life to translating voluminous notes, collected over a period of many years, into a biography of the Englishman.

In May, 1868, Lord Brougham delivered a speech against slavery. Louis, in the course of an exhaustive reading of history, law and biography, discovered the address. From that day on he read everything he could find about Lord Brougham and his contemporaries. And, consequently, today Louis has the most complete set of notes in existence concerning the former chancellor.

He has read the history of every English lawyer in the past 50 years. He has read American history, law and biography. In Louis' spacious library at his home, 237 Florida avenue northwest, there are eight tons of books, countless volumes. He has read them all. He reads with the rapidity and concentration of Lord MacCauley, 16 and 20 hours a day, far into the night.

At the age of 9, Louis says he knew more about Blaine and Conkling than most men do at 29. His mother, at the "Rockabye My Baby on Your Mammy's Knee" age was reading him Shakespeare and the letters of George Washington. His father, who was a sexton of Harmony Cemetery, coming into the house late of an evening, would watch the rapt lad with adoration listening to the reading of his mother at the fireside.

"He will be a great man some day," the father vowed; "a great man."

Louis may have not attained the stature of greatness as Abraham Lincoln attained greatness, or Lord Brougham, or Booker T. Washington, but he has the greatness of a well-read man and a scholar. He has the faith of every man who knows him.

Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, came in to say good-by to Louis yesterday afternoon.

"If I had secret information about myself that would mean my death if it was known," said Dr. Kramer, "I would willingly tell it to Louis."

Louis was involuntarily retired by the Board of Education. His job has been abolished in line with the economy program of the board. Louis said that he is sorry to leave because of the friendships he has made. He added that he is glad to retire because he can rest. Then, in the next breath, he started to talk about the book he is going to write about Lord Brougham.

Air Service Rates Down 25 Per Cent

(Associated Press.)

Air mail operators were notified yesterday that service rates would be reduced 25 per cent on July 1, pending determination of new rates and route readjustments. Postage rates for air mail remain the same.

To date, the Postoffice Department announced there has been no curtailment in mileage of air mail routes.

The order was necessitated by the reduced appropriation for the service, a cut from $19,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Operators were requested to submit not later than July 9 their suggestions for the order of preference in which the curtailment on the routes be made.

Representatives of the carriers are expected to meet with postal officials here shortly after July 9 to discuss means of increasing utilization of the air mail.

3 QUIZZED IN KILLING OF VIRGINIA WOMEN

Massachusetts Trio Grilled by Florida Officials in Fatal Beatings of Two.

Cambridge, Mass., June 29 (A.P.).—Florida officials today completed their investigation in this vicinity of the slaying of two Virginia women, at Miami last month, and prepared to return to Florida.

State's Attorney Vernon Hawthorne and State Detective John B. Rowland, of Florida, questioned James R. Humphreys, 29, of Andover, former Florida hotel owner; Madeline Gover, 20, of Revere, his sister-in-law, and Mrs. Ida Humphreys, 45, of Newton, his mother.

Hawthorne declined to disclose whether he would seek grand jury indictments on information secured here.

"I have received certain information through my trip North, but it must be checked with other facts in Florida before I can reveal its nature or take any action," he said.

Humphreys was part-owner of the Admiral Hotel, in Miami, in which Mrs. Myer Shipero, 43, and Miss Lillian Howard, sisters, both of Woodstock, Va., stopped shortly before their bodies were found in Dumfoundling Bay, near Miami, June 1. They had been beaten to death, apparently with robbery as a motive.

Homecoming

Globe-Trotting Mrs. Hutton Will Return Quietly to Angelus Temple.

Los Angeles, Calif., June 29 (A.P.).—After all this furore over a baby and divorce rumors and cliques at Angelus Temple, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton is coming home quietly to settle down after her latest fling at globe-trotting, her husband, David Hutton, said today.

Hutton said the evangelist is coming home in about two weeks, having shown remarkable recuperative powers after an operation in Paris that is now generally understood to have been plastic and not obstetrical.

He added that Mrs. McPherson-Hutton had announced her plans in a private message to him. The husband of the evangelist fumed a few days ago because she had been addressing her messages to him through temple headquarters.

But right on the heels of the peace and quiet which pervaded the parsonage where Hutton was living came another announcement—that Roberta Semple Smythe, daughter of Mrs. McPherson-Hutton, had sailed for Paris from New York Tuesday. That, admitted Hutton, was a fresh mystery.

During the eight-day run the car's speedometer registered a total of 5,022.1 miles. It averaged 22.532 miles per gallon of gasoline, and used a total of 1.578 gallons of oil.

Mrs. Weightman estimated the mileage covered at 5,000 and based her estimate on the distance likely to be covered by an automobile on that amount of gasoline during a transcontinental trip.

The car will be presented to Mrs. Weightman at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at Ford dealers display at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

THE MEANDERER

Finds Heat Dissipators, Large and Small, Old and New.

Telephone questions on The Meanderer's column to The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 19; or address The Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Seven beer bottles and some ice—or six beer bottles and a lot of ice, may be carried in a brand new container that has arrived in the housewares section of a big department store. The container is of metal, with a tight-fitting lid and molded sides to fit the contours of bottles, so that if the packed beer kit is taken on a motor outing there is no rattling of bottles. The container costs just $1. Needless to say, any beverage in any standard size pint bottle may be packed in the container.

A 2-quart ice cream freezer of a satisfactory make is featured at the special price of $1.65 in the housewares section aforementioned.

Boon to the overheated cook is a little electric stove, which is insulated to prevent escape of the heat. It is portable, weighing about 20 pounds, and may be used as a hot plate or as an oven. An oven heat regulator is an economical, convenient feature of this little stove, which sells for $6.95 in the same housewares department.

Immense beach hats, as large in diameter as widespread parasols, are showing in bright striped patterns in a department store window. "Beach sheets" are immense Turkish cloths of sheet size that may be wrapped about the bather or spread on the sands to provide sun-bath space for several persons.

Pique it would be—and the Meanderer is about to be piqued at having to write that word pique so endlessly—well, again, pique it would be that makes the underwear the Meanderer believes to be the scantiest ever recommended for women. This underwear is in two parts, a most abbreviated panty and a brassiere of white silk pique. Less than a week on sale in Washington, this summery offering has sold by the dozens.

A vacation and travel service bureau furnishing free of charge to customers such services as planning trips, making reservations and securing tickets, is a refuge for heat sufferers these hot days, in a big department store.

"Anthony Adverse," that much touted novel of romance, faraway countries and an arresting literary style that critics have praised, may be counted upon to make the reader forget the heat, says the F Street book shop selling the new novel.

Culbertson on Bridge

MINIMUM BIDDING.

THERE has developed recently in the world of Bridge a school of players who pride themselves that they always make minimum responses. Partners of such players must be well-nigh psychic to determine whether the two-spade bid in the following example.

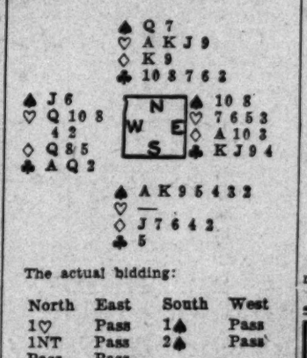
is a sign-off or is showing a strong hand. If the guess is correct, no harm may be done, but, after all, the principles of correct bidding require that you subject your partner to as few guesses as possible and do not expect him to make any bid that you yourself should make.

A recent team-of-four match in New York City gives point to this story of minimum bidding.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The actual bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	1♠	Pass
1NT	Pass	2♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Obviously the hand, as it lies, must make a game, but North, with a near minimum hand, cannot determine this fact. In fact, with this hand, it is quite possible that even the contract of two spades is in danger, if, as he fears, South holds a spade suit and nothing else.

As the hand was actually played, five were made, and North and South began a discussion of the result.

"I didn't want to jump the bidding when I was void of your suit," South explained.

But North was far from satisfied.

"If you want me to understand your bids," he responded, "you must make them in language that I understand. The one-spade response to my Opening bid was correct, but after my response of one notrump, showing a minmum biddable suit and a near minimum hand, you must make a stronger bid than two spades if we are to reach game."

The correct bidding on this hand would be:

North	East	South	West
1♡	Pass	1♠	Pass
1NT	Pass	3♠ or 4♠	Pass

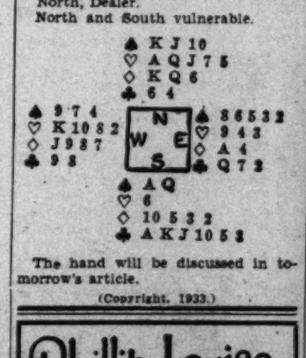
If South bids three spades, then North, with an honor in the suit, should raise to four. Actually, however, with South's seven-card suit, it is likely that his best bid is four spades over one notrump. This does not in any sense invite a Slam, in view of the fact that he failed to force on the first round of bidding. It does absolutely assure that the hand will be played at game—and that is where it belongs, since, as the cards are distributed, the contract would be made against any defense. However, even granted the contract was defeated 1 trick, it is just as well for Bridge players to keep in mind the admonition given to all schoolboys:

"Not failure, but low aim is crime."

TOMORROW'S HAND

This hand was played in an International Match, with North as Dealer. How would America and England respectively bid the North and South cards?

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

"CANCER."

INFLUENCES operating on this day are such that you may possibly make sudden and hurried plans for a trip of some length; you will probably combine both business and pleasure. Cross-currents of love and hate will run through your life on this day, and in some cases it will be difficult to know friend from foe.

The child born on this June 30 will probably be one who has to be coaxed a good deal. He will not hesitate to make his feelings known a deeply religious nature and will enjoy music. Will probably show talent in playing some instrument.

If June 30 is the date of your birth, you probably lay great stress on refinement and education. If you did not have the opportunity when young to educate yourself properly, you will probably make up for it in some other way. You are, to begin with, a great reader; more than that, you are a student of man and men and you derive great benefit and inspiration from biographies.

Born on June 30, you are undoubtedly known as a good neighbor and you have a very high reputation in your community. The women especially are ever helpful to their neighbors; they do not gossip nor buzz with scandal, but are on hand to lend a hand when they are needed. They are fond of children, seem to know just how to handle them and are unusually successful in taking care of the sick. Clubs, church committees and organizations abound with these people who are active always in seeking the common good. They are born leaders of small groups.

Successful people born on June 30: Harriet W. Sewall, poet.

DISABLED VETERANS ASK HINES' REMOVAL

Representative Harlan Booed and Douglas Condemned at Stormy Session.

Cincinnati, June 29 (A.P.).—Immediate removal of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines as administrator of veterans affairs was demanded by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War today in a turbulent session.

Bitter because the Government's economy program reduced allowances given disabled former soldiers, the veterans' convention demanded that Hines be dismissed without a pension; booed Representative Byron Harlan, of Dayton, Ohio, when he attempted a defense of the program, and "condemned" Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, "for his hostile attitude toward the disabled veterans and repudiation of promises."

Harlan's Defense Jeered.

Harlan's defense of the administration's policy was almost drowned out by jeers that swept the auditorium. The gavel of National Commander William Conley rang a tattoo as he struggled to keep order amid cries of "Sit down! Sit down!" Once he peremptorily ordered the sergeant at arms to "get busy," with little avail.

The storm had been brewing for days. Though finally deciding not to support full payment on soldiers' compensation certificates, the delegates unanimously demanded that the Government return to the level of disability payments in force before the economy act of March 20.

Gen. Hines addressed the convention yesterday, after opposition to his appearance had been squelched and promised "our country, our President, and our people will always deal fairly with your organization."

Urge Validity Test.

Hines was not here today, however, when a two-paragraph resolution was approved asking President Roosevelt immediately to remove him and J. C. O'Roberts, his assistant, and to consult veterans' organizations before appointing their successors. The brief resolution gave no explanation of the veterans' reasons.

The demonstration against Harlan broke as he assured the veterans the Government should and would take care of them, but added "the Government has not money enough to squander funds right and left on nonservice cases."

It broke out again when he said there were some mistakes in the economy measure and that it would be two years before they all could be rectified.

When he had finished, the convention approved a resolution of thanks "to those intrepid souls who made efforts in Congress to defeat the economy act" and urged a test of the constitutionality of the legislation.

THREATS OF SLAYING HEARD AT MICK TRIAL

Accused Wife Is Calm as Her Life Hinges on Quiz at Towson, Md.

Towson, Md., June 29 (A.P.).—A State witness in the trial of Mrs. Janice A. Mick, on trial for the murder of her husband, testified in the Baltimore County Circuit Court here tonight that he had heard the defendant threaten to kill her husband several times within three or four months before the alleged crime.

The witness was L. W. Burton, a farmer residing in the county where the Mick home is located, and who said he had visited the Mick home 10 or 15 times during the past year, but could not recall why he went there.

Asked by Meyer Getz, prosecuting attorney, to repeat a statement Burton had told him following Mick's death, the witness said:

"She told me that he (Mick) had been carrying on around here and she was not going to put up with it and she would kill him. She said it three or four times. She told me this at her home."

The 33-year-old defendant sat unconcerned throughout this testimony, as she had all the rest except when the clothing worn by her husband was held up before the jury as evidence. Then she hid her face in her hand.

The first surprise in the trial, which began this morning, came when the prosecution told the jurors it expected to prove that two days before Mrs. Mick killed her husband, Lonnie, he had obtained a signed statement that she and an employe on their farm had been intimate.

The prosecution later was barred from offering the statement in evidence on objection by the defense, who, during its opening statement, pictured Mick as a habitual drinker and as keeping Mrs. Mick "in mortal fear of him." The defense outlined its case, asserting a plea of self defense will be made.

Chinese R. F. C. Loan Aid Named.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Appointment of J. J. Lavin, Western grain man, as Pacific Coast representative of the Chinese government agency which will purchase 15,000,000 bushels of wheat with a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan, was announced here today.

Fireman's Parade Plans Elate Chief G. S. Watson

Officially Thanks Post for Sponsorship of Eleventh Annual Labor Day Event and Immediately Invites Police Participation, Which Is Assured.

Official thanks to The Washington Post for its sponsorship of the eleventh annual firemen's Labor Day parade were given yesterday by George S. Watson, chief engineer of the District Fire Department.

Chief Watson had hardly finished saying how glad he was the colorful event was to be held, when he thought of something else.

"What about the policemen?" he asked. "They've always taken part." Off he went in his big red car to Police Headquarters.

It took Maj. Ernest Brown just two minutes to tell the fire chief that the Police Department would be glad to participate. Orders to that effect will be issued.

Chief Watson is drawing up a broadside in which he will ask his men to lend their aid and interest to the Labor Day pageant.

Meanwhile, Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, the man who staged the first firefighter's parade eleven years ago and has continued as the moving force behind them, put machinery to work. Invitations to come to Washington for the occasion are in preparation. They will be sent to thousands of fire departments throughout the Nation.

Working with the sergeant are Noble Rushe, vice president of the National Firemen's Association, and chief of the Hyattsville Fire Department, and George Finger, of Capitol Heights, Md., organizer.

They secured the cooperation of Odell S. Smith, of the Board of Trade, to assist in organization and committee work. Mr. Smith enthusiastically stated he would help.

Firemen throughout the District, nearby Maryland and Virginia were gladdened yesterday morning when they read in The Post the parade was not to be abandoned this year. Many of these communicated directly with Sergt. Bargagni.

A meeting of the Firefighters Association, local organization of firemen, and the Officers Association will be held early next week.

Chief O. E. Fern, superintendent of machinery of the District Fire Department, who always has given much time and attention to the building of floats, suggested to The Post that suggestions from professional designers and decorators would be received gladly this year.

At an early meeting of the National Firemen's Association committees will be appointed.

All details and items of interest pertaining to the parade will be published daily in The Post. Suggestions from firemen in the District and elsewhere are welcomed. Communications should be addressed to The Post, or to the Parade Committee, at the District Training School.

Percy A. Rockefeller Examined at Hospital

FARM BUREAU PLANS NEW FIELD STATIONS

Market Service Depends on Cooperation of Fresh-Fruit Areas.

(Associated Press.)

The Department of Agriculture said yesterday that under the plan for limited continuation of the market news service a group of field stations probably will be maintained in the fresh fruit and vegetable growing and marketing areas.

Actual operation of the stations, it said, will depend upon continuance of State financial cooperation and in the case of two, Idaho Falls, Idaho, and the apple market service covering the Pacific Northwest at Portland, Oreg., upon local financial aid.

The offices tetatively scheduled to be maintained are: Plant City, Fla.; Brawley, Calif.; Sanford, Fla.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Hastings, Fla.; Bradenton, Fla.; Belle Glade, Fla.; Pomano, Fla.; Chadbourn, N. C.; Mobile, Ala.; Pocomoke City, Md.; Washington, N. C.; Jacksonville, Tex.

Leesburg, Fla.; Macon, Ga.; Moultrie, Ga.; Candor, N. C.; Fresno, Calif.; Benton Harbor, Mich.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Rochester, N. Y.; Presque Isle, Me.; Waupaca, Wis.; Idaho Falls, Idaho; Winter Haven, Fla.

In addition, the department said, three separate services will be continued at Phoenix for winter lettuce, spring lettuce and cantaloupes. None of these services will be operated simultaneously or concurrently, and it is counted as the location of the three offices.

At Brawley two services, cantaloupes and lettuce, will be maintained. At Macon service for peaches and also for watermelons will be provided, and it will be counted as the site of two offices.

The Portland, Oreg., station for apple service is intended to supplant the Northwestern apple service now provided at Spokane.

DANCERS AND BAND AT SYLVAN THEATER

Lisa Gardiner, Her Group and Benter's Crew Are Acclaimed by 5,000.

With Lisa Gardiner and her dancers and the United States Navy Band, under the direction of Lieut. Charles Benter, jointly featured, the Community Center Department presented last evening in the Sylvan Theater its fourth Summer Festival before an enthusiastic audience of more than 5,000.

Preceding the dance recital, the Navy Band played a delightful program, including the march "Trafalgar" (Zehle), "La Princess Jaune" overture (Saint-Saens) and a dance arrangement by Arnold of American plantation songs. Musician Birley Gardner played Rogers' "The Volunteer" as a cornet solo.

Accompanying most of the dance numbers, with Mrs. Edith H. Hunter doubling on the Center's time-honored Kimball, the band greately enhanced the premiere's of "A Sea Fantasy," danced to the music of Mendelssohn, and the "Pavlowa Gavotte," to the music of Linke and charmingly danced by Betty Yoder and Christine Stewart.

"Pirouette" (Glazounoff) was interpreted by Frances Randa and Ann Vucinovich. As her special number, Miss Gardiner presented her impression of "Voices of Spring" to the music of the immortal Strauss.

As the finale to the exceptional program, the ensemble, with Miss Gardiner as the solo dancer, offered for the first time the ballet from "Prince Igor" (Borodin), a colorful Russian conclusion made still more glamorous by the Navy Band's accompaniment.

Among the other dancers taking part were Mary Day, Alice Louise Hunter, Kitty Marie De Lany, Vivian Dawson, Daphne Humphrey, Marjorie Beall, Kathleen Piazza, Leila Gurley, Georgia Hiden, Esther Whited, Helen Roberts, Elizabeth Berkeley, Polly Pickett, Irene Bontz, Lora Wills, Fillis Speich, Eda Vomacka, Charlotte Walton, Barbara Worrell, Nancy Willard, Betty Todd, Margaret Cobey and Patsy Ennis.

Florida Prison Guards Warned Against Beating

Tallahassee, Fla., June 29 (A.P.).—A warning to prison camp officials to "be very careful in their manner of dealing with convicts" was issued today by Nathan Mayo, Florida prison division head, with an explanation that a new State law places guards in the position of civilians, with no more right to use guns than ordinary citizens.

Mayo said any one striking, beating or mistreating convicts would be "prosecuted by the courts."

Report on Seaway Called Propaganda

Chicago, June 29 (U.P.).—Charges that a report condemning engineering provisions of the pending St. Lawrence seaway treaty with Canada is propaganda tending to serve private power interests and defeat ratification of the treaty threw the annual meeting of American Engineering Societies into turmoil tonight.

The report, read before a joint meeting of civil engineers and associated societies, was prepared by Daniel W. Mead, professor emeritus of engineering at the University of Wisconsin and a veteran hydraulic consulting engineer who has fulfilled important contracts for power companies.

The charges of propagandism were made by Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Power Authority of New York State and were reiterated in a telegram to Walsh from United States Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin. Mead answered the accusations with a ringing denial at the start of his report in the crowded grand ballroom of the Palmer House.

$700 Pay Roll Theft Suspect Is Seized

Baltimore, June 29 (A.P.).—Vincent Downorowicz, alias Vincent Davis, 28, alleged leader of a Trenton, N. J. gang, was arrested at the home of his sister here today, accused of a $700 pay roll robbery last December.

Trenton detectives, James Delouie, Clarence Briest and Louis Sigafroos, said the charge was one of 22 against him, which include holdups, automobile theft and carrying concealed weapons.

The specific charge on which he was arrested today was robbing John Ross, paymaster of the Young Rubber Mills at Trenton.

Paramount Company Will Increase Output

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Paramount Picture executives in annual convention today were told by George J. Schaefer, general manager, that the production schedule for the 1933-34 season will be stepped up to 65 features, an increase of about 10 per cent.

Next year's production will start within a few days. Total production, including shorts, will near 300.

Girl Aided Police Solve Kidnaping

Denver, June 29 (A.P.).—Miss Lucille Fletcher, 21, former University of Colorado student, was revealed today as one of the persons whose information helped police solve the Charles Boettcher 2d kidnaping case.

Ralph Carr, United States district attorney, recommended that she receive some share of the $25,000 reward posted by Claude K. Boettcher, wealthy father of the kidnaping victim. Mayor George Begole has been selected to distribute the reward money.

Carr said Miss Fletcher gave officers information she obtained from Mrs. Frances Ellsworth, a friend. This consisted of remarks to Mrs. Ellsworth by Carl W. Pearce, convicted with Arthur Youngberg, as an aid of the kidnapers.

Jobless Barber Shoots Children

Muskogee, Okla., June 29 (A.P.).—In a state of collapse, Mrs. Jap Ingram, estranged wife of the unemployed barber who is accused of shooting to death his two small children because he believed they were starving, was under the care of a physician here tonight.

Relatives told officers Ingram, 35, went to a little cotton farm near Coweta yesterday, wounded Sam Sewell, his father-in-law, and John Voss, Sewell's stepson, then led his tiny son and daughter to a farmhouse wall and shot them down.

"They were dirty and ragged," he said. "I knew they had nothing to eat but corn bread."

He was arrested an hour after the shooting as he was hitch-hiking toward Sand Springs, where his wife was employed.

Wets Charge Favor to Drys In Virginia's Session Date

Prohibitionists Renew Hope in Primary Election Preceding Special Convening of Legislature August 10 and Will Strive to Name Arid Men.

The beer vote demand which forced Virginia's Governor to call a special session of the Legislature is admittedly a wet victory, but the wiley governor extracted from it the last drop of comfort for the drys, wet leaders were complaining last night.

In setting the special session for August 10, Gov. Pollard well served the drys who have been his allies, is the plaint of the wets. The session will start nine days after the primary when the personnel of the regular session next January will be chosen.

Because of this order of dates, those members of the Legislature whose vote is still doubtful will be able to ballot according to the results of the primary. If Virginia goes wet in the primary, those dry legislators who are willing to compromise will be able to vote for beer and a repeal action the next week. At the same time, a dry victory in the primary will hearten the prohibition forces and possibly bring them sufficient allies to block a move for beer and repeal.

The second service to the drys is even more potent. Natural drys who can evade preprimary questions about their intentions may lend their constituents to the primary still ignorant of their wet or dry tendencies. If the special session had preceded the primary, these evaders would have been forced into the open and their sympathies shown by their vote on the wet issues, wets declare.

Merchants in nearby counties last night were jubilant over the possibility of beer sales within 60 days. It is no secret that Virginians around the borders of the State have been driving through one or more counties to reach beer.

Even though the special session may not permit general beer sales in the State, the Virginia law is likely to be amended to allow 3.2 sales in the border counties which have lost most heavily during the Virginia drought, in the hopes of Virginia merchants.

The exact sequence of events which brought up so suddenly the petition for a special session also was revealed yesterday. It appears that George C. Peery, candidate for governor, has the backing of Senator Harry Flood Byrd. Mr. Peery is avowedly a wet. His wet managers, within the last 10 days, have appealed to Senator Byrd. The underlying content of the appeal has been that the voters can't be kept in line if the beer question is to be softpedaled. The senator bowed, and word went out that it was permissible for good Democrats to sign the petition for a special session. Whereupon the petition was started, signed and presented, and the special session called.

Tuberculosis War Led by Pritchard

Toronto, Ont., June 29 (A.P.).—Dr. J. Stuart Pritchard, of Battle Creek, Mich., general director of the W. K. Kellogg Foundation, today was elected president of the National Tuberculosis Association, in annual convention here. President Roosevelt was elected honorary president.

Other officers selected were first vice president, George F. Canfield, New York; second vice president, Dr. H. R. M. Landis, Philadelphia; secretary, Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, Philadelphia, and treasurer, Collier Platt, New York.

The board of directors passed a resolution authorizing the sending of a telegram to the Federal Relief Administration, at Washington, indorsing the proposal of Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming that from the funds voted for relief by the last Congress, appropriations be made for the maintenance of county health units in States where funds are lacking.

SKY-LINE HIGHWAY OPENING POSTPONED

Shenandoah Park's Beautiful Drive Is Still Being Built, Says Ickes.

Although practically complete, the beautiful Skyline Drive, which skirts the top of the Blue Ridge in the proposed Shenandoah National Park, Va., can not be opened to the public this season, Secretary of Interior Ickes announced yesterday.

Thousands of motorists will regret this announcement, as the highway is said to be one of the most remarkable in the world and is within easy driving distance of Washington.

The new highway, on which certain details of construction are still in progress, can not be opened for traffic until the park is established and a governmental administrative and protective force installed, Mr. Ickes said.

Litigation has arisen in connection with the transfer of certain lands to the Government for park purposes, he declared, adding that under the act of Congress the park can not be established until all the land within its boundaries has been transferred to the United States by the State of Virginia.

Meanwhile, the new highway, built as an emergency relief measure during the past two years, is closed by locked gates and is accessible only to engineers engaged on the road work. State authorities engaged in acquiring the lands, and officials of the two conservation camps now being operated in the proposed park area.

Informal Stock Reports Allowed

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday announced that it would permit those desiring to file registration statements on securities under the new securities act to do so until July 7 without using regular registration blanks.

The decision to permit informal applications for registration to be made was reached after the commission found it would be impossible to meet the immediate demand for formal registration applications.

However, the commission ruled that formal applications for registration of securities under the act would have to be filed in lieu of the informal documents 10 days before the act permits registration, which is July 27.

Baltimore, June 29 (A.P.).—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday anniversary in bed here today, recuperating from an operation. Telegrams from hundreds of well-wishers, including a personal message from President Roosevelt, were received.

The message from the President wished the senator a speedy recovery and carried a birthday greeting. On a stand at the senator's bedside was a bouquet of white roses from the White House garden.

Senator Borah was operated on Monday at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He is expected to be able to return to his Washington home in several weeks.

Wife's Alienation Suit Names Claire Windsor

Los Angeles, June 29 (A.P.).—Brought to the Los Angeles Superior Court from San Francisco on a change of venue, a suit for $100,000, alleging alienation of affections, was filed against Claire Windsor, motion picture actress, by Marion V. Read, who asserts Miss Windsor stole the love of her husband, Alfred C. Read, jr., formerly of Oakland.

With Mrs. Read's petition was an answer filed by the film actress denying all the allegations.

Adm. Craven to Command Division One of Battle Fleet

Chief Coordinator Under Budget Recipient of Many Medals.

Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven, U. S. N., who has served as chief coordinator under the Director of the Budget since May 1931, has been ordered to command Battleship Division One, Battle Force, when the services of the coordinator's office are terminated by the President, it was announced yesterday at the Navy Department.

Rear Admiral Craven was born in Vallejo, Calif., July 8, 1873, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from Tennessee in 1890. During the Spanish-American War he served on the U. S. S. Eagle, and in 1899 was attached to the Asiatic Fleet.

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal as commanding officer of the U. S. S. Sacramento in escorting convoys of troops through the war zone, and later as aid for aviation in charge of naval aviation forces in France.

From 1922 to 1925 he was in command of the naval air station, San Diego, Calif., and, after commanding the U. S. S. Maryland, served as director of naval communications from 1927 to 1929, when he was appointed commandant of the Ninth Naval District, Great Lakes, Ill. From May, 1929, to 1931, he commanded the Yangtze Patrol of the United States Asiatic Fleet.

Rear Admiral Craven was awarded the decoration of "Officer of the Legion of Honor" by France and the war medal and diploma by Italy. He makes his home here at 1716 N street northwest.

'Y' SWIMMING POOL OPENS NEXT SUNDAY

First Time in 81 Years Non-religious Activities Are Allowed on Sabbath.

The Y. M. C. A. is going modern.

Next Sunday, for the first time since it was founded 81 years ago by a group of local laymen and clergymen, the pool in the Central Y. M. C. A. will be thrown open to Y. M. C. A. members and their guests.

The decision to open the pool from 2 to 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoons was reached this week by the board of managers of the Y. M. C. A. after members of the staff had consulted a number of local ministers and found no objection to the plan.

The staff also had considered inviting wives and daughters of members to join in the Sunday swims, but lack of locker and shower facilities prevented inclusion of women.

The Washington association is believed to be among the first in the United States to depart from the traditional rule that only religious activities must take place in Y. M. C. A buildings on the Sabbath.

Leonard W. De Gast, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., placed the proposal informally before a meeting of the Methodist Protestant Preachers Association this week and members of that group voiced their approval. The Rev. H. A. Kester, president of the preachers' body and pastor of the Congress Street M. P. Church in Georgetown, said he favored the plan because it would not conflict with church-going and because "I would rather have young men spend their Sunday afternoons in the Y. M. C. A. pool than a lot of other places." The Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, pastor of the First Congregational Church, also indorsed the plan.

Undertakers Will Draft Code for Fair Business

Bolton Landing, N. Y., June 29 (U.P.).—A code of fair trade practices for America's funeral directors will be drafted at regional meetings July 20, John W. Mattie, Rochester, N. Y., president of the National Funeral Directors Association, announced today.

The meetings will be held at New York City, Chicago, San Francisco, Atlanta, Ga., and Kansas City, Kans. The code, after being completed, will be submitted to President Roosevelt's national recovery administration for approval.

PROBATION IN U. S. PRISONS DEFENDED

System Held Vital to Cope With General Crowded Conditions.

Without probation the Federal prison system would have been utterly unable to cope with the vast increase of Federal offenders, which has occurred in the past decade due to enactment of new Federal criminal statutes, Representative William B. Oliver said last night in a radio talk over Station WMAL.

"Currently," he said, "there are nearly 13,000 men and women in Federal prisons, reformatories, jails and prison camps and almost a like number of Federal prisoners in State or municipal-owned prisons."

He declared that Federal penal conditions are steadily improving under the direction of Sanford Bates, chief of the Bureau of Prisons. "It has been probation which has gone so far to solve the Federal crime problem," he concluded.

The talk was made under the Washington Community Forum sponsorship. After Representative Oliver had finished, Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, briefly told of the value of the Bureau of Rehabilitation in making useful and law-abiding citizens.

Philippine Leaders Fight on Freedom

Manila, P. I., June 29 (A.P.).—An open fight between Filipino political leaders took form today as champions of the independence act answered the "declaration of war" by Manuel Quezon, Senate president.

Sailing for Iloilo to make a series of speeches in support of the act, Senator Sergio Osmena and Speaker of the House Manuel Roxas, declared "we have accepted the challenge of Quezon to submit the issue to a direct vote of the people."

Breaking an agreement to accept the act conditionally, Quezon yesterday said speeches of Osmena and Roxas "have closed all doors to any possible understanding." In their joint statement today the champions of the act said they had tried to avoid a fight despite a "campaign of vilification" while they were in Washington, D. C., working for a congressional grant of independence.

Turkey Places Ban On Free Love Pact

Istanbul, Turkey, June 29 (U.P.).—Free love contracts have proved too popular in this land of the harem and caliphs, so the government moved today to halt this legal procedure.

The ministry of justice, prohibiting further free love contracts, announced that 900 such arrangements had been concluded in the presence of public notaries. Some involved married men and their women servants, others married men and single women, the report showed. An indemnity clause protects the concubine in case of a breach of the terms of the union.

But the modern regime, desiring to protect Turkey's youth, ordered the notaries to cease stamping the contracts.

World Labor Parley Asks Help for Political Exiles

Geneva, June 29 (A.P.).—The International Labor Conference today adopted a resolution declaring that the International Labor Office should assist the Germans who were obliged to leave Germany for religious or political reasons.

The conference, at which an American delegation is present for the first time since 1919, also approved a convention for old age and sickness insurance for commercial, industrial and agricultural workers.

Inheritance Tax Boost Urged by U.S. Teachers

Milwaukee, Wis., June 29 (A.P.).—Sharp increases in inheritance taxes on large estates today were made a part of the taxation program of the American Federation of Teachers.

Henry R. Linville, of New York, was reelected president.

provisions of the industrial recovery act will plug this avenue of escape and make capital losses susceptible of taxation.

Meanwhile, however, Mr. Kahn was unable to explain satisfactorily the sale and subsequent assignment to him of certain stocks that enabled him to claim a loss of some $117,000. He remembered that he had originally intended to establish a trust fund for his daughter, Maud H. Marriot, and for her English husband, Maj. John H. V. Marriot, former attache of the British Embassy here. Both Mr. Kahn and his daughter were abroad at the time the stock transfers and sale had been made. Mr. Kahn, in a very deprecating manner, said:

"It was all done under a plan worked out by my lawyers and her solicitors."

Mr. Pecora failed to be appeased by this explanation and asked Mr. Kahn about the demand made on him by a field agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau for a tax payment of $16,000. This charge was subsequently challenged by Mr. Kahn's lawyers, the contention of the banker sustained by the Board of Tax Appeals, and then the same New York agent that had originally found the Kahn income liable for $16,000 corrected his opinion in harmony with the opinion rendered by the Board of Appeals.

Hearings Recess Today.

This detail of his financial history likewise escaped Mr. Kahn's notice at the time. Mr. Pecora declined the suggestion that was made to have the field agent, N. C. Shields, brought here for examination and explanation of the reversal of his decision. "Let some other Governmental agency do it, if they want to, as he would have the cloak of immunity here," Pecora explained.

Mr. Pecora turned solicitously to the 66-year-old banker at the end of yesterday's session and inquired:

"Do you want to continue still further, Mr. Kahn?" The banker lit another cigarette and replied:

"Go ahead, I am as fresh as a daisy."

Members of the committee demurred, however, and at their desire the hearing was put over until today. The hearings will be terminated for the present this afternoon. Early in October the committee will meet again, when Mr. Pecora will bring back to the stand the partners of J. P. Morgan, Kuhn, Loeb and Dillon, Read. At that time, Chairman Fletcher indicated yesterday, some investigation into the present boom market will be made. The senator said:

"Our investigation will simply be based on anticipation of what prices may be under the new governmental program."

Kahn Explains List.

The Kuhn, Loeb list was not, perhaps, as impressive in length as some of those offered by J. P. Morgan & Co. to the attention of the committee, but several names arrested attention. The system that was employed in including them in the syndicate was a simple one. As Mr. Kahn explained it:

"They were old friends and it was of great value to us to be able to go to them and get their judgment. In order not to impose on them we extended these tokens of good will amounting to insignificant sums."

The Kuhn, Loeb list included the name of Charles E. Mitchell, recently acquitted on income tax charges brought by the Federal Government. Pecora looked up from the yard-long sheet:

"Do you mean to say you went to your competitor for advice?"

Mr. Kahn, composedly:

"Quite so, quite so. We would not hesitate to ask his advice." At one time the former City Bank head was invited to buy 2,000 shares Baltimore & Ohio at 93½ and sell them for 95.

Distribution of Favor.

Percy A. Rockefeller was enabled, however, to make a greater potential profit than his colleague of the National City Bank. Kuhn, Loeb had reserved for Mr. Rockefeller $2,100,000 worth of bonds and 17,000 stocks. The stocks that were included in the syndicate offer were Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing, U. S. Rubber, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania R. R., Baltimore & Ohio, Western Union, Missouri Pacific and Delaware & Hudson. Newcomb Carlton, of the Western Union, was allotted by the banking house $1,450,000 bonds and 3,750 stocks; L. F. Loree, of the Delaware & Hudson, $1,100,000 bonds and 3,500 stocks; A. H. Wiggin, $1,200,000 bonds and 9,000 stocks; Charles E. Mitchell, $200,000 bonds and 11,000 stocks; Henry W. DeForest, of the Union Pacific Railroad, $1,000,000 bonds and 9,500 shares; P. H. Ecker, of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., $75,000 bonds and 3,750 stocks.

These bonds and shares of stock were made available to the members of the syndicate at a price that was usually less than that paid by the public. In isolated instances, however, the syndicate paid the same price as the public.

Fire Horse

Chief Watson, Back After Illness, Is Like That in Answering Alarms.

Like the proverbial fire horse, when the gong clangs he's got to go—that's Chief George S. Watson.

The chief returned to work this week after an illness of two months. Yesterday somebody asked how he was.

"Great!" answered the veteran firefighter.

"Will you answer calls at night?"

"Sure."

The inquisitor looked puzzled. "But you have been ill. You mean you'll just answer five alarms?"

"From two alarms up," came back the respected head man of Washington's firefighters.

Byrd Sends Hines Board Applicants

(Associated Press.)

Senator Byrd said yesterday he is passing on to the Veterans Administration, without comment, all applications for the veterans board of review for Virginia. The board of three members is to pass on claims of veterans whose compensation has been cut or stopped under the recent economy orders. Mr. Byrd said the board "is outside what I regard as patronage."

Veterans organizations and chambers of commerce as well as political leaders have been called for recommendations on board members.

Members of the State boards are to receive $15 a day. They are to be convened about July 10 and will sit not longer than October 31. Mr. Byrd said between 50 and 60 persons had applied to him for the three jobs.

Von Papen Discusses Treaty With Pacelli

Vatican City, June 29 (U.P.).—The projected concordat between Germany and the Holy See was discussed in detail today by Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, of Berlin, and Cardinal Pagelli, papal secretary of state.

HITLER WINS MAJOR POLITICAL VICTORY

Hindenburg Accepts Resignation of Dr. Hugenburg; Appoints Schmitt.

Berlin, June 29 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler won another major political victory today when President Paul von Hindenburg formally accepted the resignation of Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, head of the Nationalist party, as minister of economics and agriculture.

The president simultaneously named Dr. Kurt Schmitt as Hugenberg's successor in the economics ministry, and Walter Darre as minister of agriculture.

At Hitler's suggestion, he appointed Gottfried Feder as undersecretary of state for economics, replacing Dr. Paul Bang, also a Nationalist party leader and aid to Dr. Hugenberg. The president's actions followed a two-day period of doubt over whether he would accede to Hitler's initiative in ousting Dr. Hugenberg and forcing the dissolution of the Nationalist party.

Von Hindenburg called Hitler to Neudeck, where he is spending the summer, for a full explanation of his action. Acceptance of the resignation followed. The Catholics are expected to dissolve before the end of the week, practically completing Hitler's ambition to rule Germany under a one-party dictatorship.

This attitude also was evidenced today in the budget announcement, which carried the title under the budget head, "Government of National-Socialist Revolution," instead of as hitherto, "Government of National Revolution."

4 Women Get $2,125,000, Ending Wendel Litigation

Mississippi, California and Washington State Relatives Settle Claims Against Huge Estate of Late Eccentric Spinster; Most Willed to Charities.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Four distant relatives of Miss Ella V. von E. Wendel settled their claims today against her estate, estimated at from $40,000,000 to $100,000,000, ending all litigation against the will of the eccentric spinster.

The four will receive a total of $2,125,000 in return for dropping action in which they contended the 80-year-old woman, who lived in a musty Fifth avenue mansion, was of unsound mind when the will was drawn.

They are Rosa Dew Stansbury, of Vicksburg, Miss.; Grace Barney McQuarrie, of Oakland, Calif.; Hattie Barney Simmons, of Spokane, Wash., and the estate of Laura Oral Harrison, of Alameda, Calif.

The settlement became known after Surrogate James A. Foley signed a decree admitting to probate the will, which leaves most of the family to which leaves most of the family fortune to charitable institutions.

A total of 2,294 claimants to the estate had been eliminated, the surrogate said. Five other fifth-degree relatives previously had compromised their claims.

In that group were Lena Barney Butler, Eddeva Barney Irwin, Gail Barney White, and Holland Vaughan Barney, of Seattle, and Effie Barney Bush, of Alameda, Calif.

"One of the most beneficial effects of this settlement," said Mr. Foley, "will be to enable the charities to obtain within a reasonable period the legacies which have been given them under the will of Miss Wendel, and to make use of these benefits at a time in the lowered economic condition of the country when they are most needed."

The settlement was announced a few hours after Thomas Patrick Morris, Brooklyn house painter, was sentenced to an indeterminate prison term on conviction of conspiracy to obtain the huge estate. The minimum he must serve is six months and the maximum three years.

A stay was granted for a week, however, at the request of Morris' attorney, who said he had just come into possession of new documentary evidence that might form the basis for a request for a new trial.

GRAIN CROPS TO SET NEW LOW RECORDS

U. S. Issues First Estimate on Recent Damage Caused by Weather.

(Associated Press.)

In the first official appraisal of recent crop damage, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics yesterday forecast the smallest crop of small grains—wheat, oats, rye, barley and flaxseed—that has been harvested in this country "in a generation."

In another announcement it attributed the recent rise in wheat prices "largely to dollar depreciation in foreign exchanges," asserting that despite crop damage in this country "the domestic market is still burdened by a very large carryover and the world market price is still at a very low level."

It estimated that the world carryover as of July 1 would be approximately 50,000,000 bushels larger than last year, which would be a new record. It set the domestic carryover at approximately the same figure as last year, 363,000,000 bushels.

Wheat Levy Date Fixed.

The bureau said drought and other weather damage had reduced the wheat crop to be harvested this year below etaimated domestic needs, which ordinarily are from 600,000,000 bushels to 650,000,000 bushels, including human food, live stock and poultry feed and about 75,000,000 bushels for seed.

Meanwhile, administrators of the farm act watched the rises in both grain and cotton prices in an attempt to measure the reduction they might cause in the processing taxes that will finance the acreage reduction programs.

The wheat levy has been fixed at 30 cents a bushel, effective at midnight, July 8, based on that margin of difference in the current average farm price and the prewar average farm price for the period May 15 to June 15. Since the latter date, wheat has increased sharply in price and administrators decided to ignore this rise in order to levy the 30-cent tax which their plans called for.

However, while they disapprove of changing the tax frequently or reducing it below 30 cents, a continuation of high prices would ultimately force them to reduce the rate under provisions of the act.

Vast Areas Affected.

The bureau said crops and pastures were seriously hurt by drought throughout June "in virtually the entire area east of the Rocky Mountains."

"Small grains have been injured most, and it appears that the total outturn will be the smallest in a generation. Oats are practically ruined over wide sections from Ohio westward, and wheat shows injury which has been rated in the markets 'sensational.'

"Reports from Nebraska and South Dakota indicate a wheat crop of only a fraction of normal, and wide areas elsewhere in the wheat belt show an exceedingly thin crop with short straw and much shriveled grain. Both wheat and oats have been cut for hay in many sections."

Despite the outlook for a crop of wheat below domestic needs, which would be the first this century, the bureau asserted that the new crop, together with the domestic carryover, "will probably provide a surplus for export."

Penn Power Filed For Incorporation

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Formation of the Penn Southern Power Co., incorporated in Delaware, to take over five of the utility companies formerly controlled by the Insulls, was announced here today.

The capital of the new company is 100,000 no-par shares. Assets will consist of the following operating companies, formerly controlled by the National Electric Power Co. or its subsidiaries: Penn Central Light & Power, Michigan Electric Power, Georgia Power & Light, Tide Water Power, and Florida Power.

Directors of the new concern are William C. Langley, Thomas H. Blodgett, H. Hobart Porter and James A. Hill. Hill is president, Langley, Blodgett and Hill will serve as trustees for the voting trust in which the stock of the company is to be held.

American Dollar Drop Aids Export Business

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 29.—That depreciation of the American dollar abroad is having a stimulating effect on the export trade of many branches of American industry is seen in reports by Kelvinator Corporation that its export business has definitely increased in the two months since the dollar began its major decline on April 20.

E. H. Wilcox, Kelvinator export manager, said that shipments of electric refrigerator equipment by his company to foreign countries in the two-month period, from April 20 to June 20, were greater by 102 per cent than those for the same period of last year, and gained 39 per cent over shipments for the previous two months. He also announced that for the first eight months of the present Kelvinator fiscal year Kelvinator foreign shipments exceeded the total for the whole of last year.

Stocks Yield Slightly In Selective Markets

Traders Move Cautiously as Money Debate Rages; Selling Gains and Causes Eight-tenths Loss; Sales, 4,592,740 Shares.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Stocks were disposed to move cautiously today as the big international debate on currency stabilization continued at full tilt.

Stocks behaved about as they did yesterday, which meant a selective market in which specialties did most of the advancing. Selling gained the upper hand during the late trading and the average net change was again a moderate loss.

Traders combed the list for possible laggards and available candidates for an advance, settling on several stocks which recently have been prominent. Commercial Solvents, American Ice, Standard Brands, Drug Inc., Eastman Kodak and a few others rallied easily, finishing with gains of 2 to 3 points. Deere received a warm reception at its big board debut (it was moved over from the curb), rising more than 5 in comparison with Wednesday's closing on the other market. Part of the gain was surrendered.

Many representative issues were much less excitable, thus conforming to recent habits. American Telephone got out of its rut for a time, but was off slightly on the day. United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Can, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, National Biscuit, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Union Pacific, New York Central, Western Union and American Tobacco B yielded major fractions to more than a point on the late reaction. Alcohol issues dropped under brisk realizing. National Distillers losing more than 5, U. S. Industrial Alcohol 3 and Owens-Illinois 4. Sales totaled 4,592,740 shares.

TRADE TRENDS.

(Associated Press.)

Copper—Current dealings in the metal are said to be light, holding firmly to the 8-cent-a-pound market. In the foreign market the range is about 8.10 to 8.15 cents.

Fertilizers—Rising prices for a number of farm products have stimulated the market for fertilizer materials, and those associated with the industry are said to be optimistic on the outlook.

Dried fruits—Stocks are comparatively light and prices are firm on most items, according to trade reports. Exporters continue to operate under a handicap because of foreign exchange fluctuations.

Canned goods—The market is reported steady for prompt deliveries, with many packers still showing a disinclination to quote prices.

WHEAT VALUES RISE ON CROP'S DAMAGES

Dollar Mark Passed Again in Trading; Corn Down; Oats Advance.

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Big crop damage reported Northwest turned wheat prices rapidly upward late today, and a dollar-a-bushel formed the rule anew at the close.

At one stage, the wheat market rose to $1.01¼. Authoritative unofficial advices said prolonged high temperatures and drought had taken heavy toll of spring wheat crops Northwest, with unnumbered stools of wheat plants destroyed, and that as a result, the production would be severely restricted, indicating virtually a one-stem crop.

Indications of general rains over the Northwest with the moisture extending into the corn belt, were construed in some quarters as meaning the end of the drought and the heat wave.

Rain Causes Setbacks.

This led to sharp temporary setbacks in wheat values, the market going to 9 cents below Tuesday's high point, but swift advances later more than overcame losses.

Wheat closed nervous, ¼ to ⅞ cents above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅜ to 1¾ cents down; oats, ½ to 1⅝ cents advanced, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents down.

Toward the last, belief became widely prevalent among wheat traders that rains which fell both sides of the Canadian border arrived too late to afford much help to stricken crops. Assertions were plentiful that this would be borne out by comprehensive private crop reports and monthly unofficial estimates due next Monday. Today's late unofficial advices said practically no district in the entire Northwest had escaped devastating effects of extreme heat and burning winds.

Maximum Crop Loss.

Maximum deterioration, today's crop reports said, had occurred in the major portion of South Dakota, and southern North Dakota, where moisture reserves were exhausted.

Severe damage was also noted in poorly farmed districts of Western North Dakota and Eastern Montana. Unusual dearth of speculative offerings distinguished the wheat market as the day drew to an end, with many friends of higher prices endeavoring to reinstate sold-out lines.

Corn failed to rally with wheat, being handicapped by large receipts and by corn belt rains. Oats displayed independent strength owing to reports that crop damage to oats was irreparable. Provisions reflected hog market downturns.

Du Pont de Nemours Workers Get More Pay

Wilmington, Del., June 29 (A. P.).—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., today announced an "upward readjustment" of pay for approximately 650 workers in Wilmington.

Those affected are employes of the engineering shop, the chemical department experimental station, the Du Pont Building Corporation, and the Hotel du Pont Co. No further details were announced. The corporation previously announced increases of approximately 5 per cent for 13,000 workers in New Jersey, New York, Tennessee and Virginia.

GOODS MARKET.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were firm today with sales limited by uncertainty concerning operations under the recovery law. Wool goods were very firm and trading light. Rayon prices are being advanced 5 cents per pound to a basis of 65 cents for 150 Denier Viscose types. Acetate producers have also begun to advance prices 5 cents a pound. Burlaps are firm with trade light. Silk goods are selling moderately for fall.

Planters of Cotton To Destroy Crops

Raleigh, N. C., June 28 (A.P.).—The first farmers to sign cotton acreage reduction in twelve of the North Carolina's 67 cotton-growing counties have agreed to retire 34½ per cent of their this year's acreage, I. O. Schaub, cotton program director for the State, said today. There have been 452 signed contracts reported, the growers agreeing to retire 1,878 acres out of 5,520 now growing cotton.

Under the cash rental plan the farmers signed to get $5,343, while those taking the rental-option plan signed to receive $17,844 and options on 1,031 bales of Government-owned cotton.

Mr. Schaub emphatically urged that no cotton farmer begin to plow up cotton or destroy it until ordered to do so. He said instructions were that none was to be destroyed until the Secretary of Agriculture announced whether the program was a success. Until that announcement is made there is no guarantee, he warned, that a farmer will be paid by the Government.

Plants Now Face Problem of Modernizing Equipment

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—With efficiency of operation a major factor in the determination of corporate profits under industrial control, the advisability of scrapping or replacing obsolete manufacturing equipment is a problem of paramount importance to business at the present time.

In some industries old equipment will have to be replaced, a development which will provide business for other industries. In other lines, efforts to reduce overcapacity will doubtless be accomplished by scrapping, without replacement, at least some portion of the obsolete equipment.

Students of the situation agree that, in a general way, obsolescence may be attributed to one or more of the following factors: Style changes, the outmoding of manufacturing processes through the development of new and improved equipment, and physical deterioration.

At the same time, another type of obsolescence has been accumulating rapidly during the depression. This relates to the substantial amount of consumer goods, such as household furnishings, clothing, automobiles, &c., which have been forced to do service far beyond the normal limit of their utility.

"Previous standards of living probably will be regained," says the Standard Statistics Co. in an analysis of this point, "even though full recovery will occupy several years and basic wants must first be satisfied before replacement purchases of automobiles and other utility items can be undertaken in full measure. The national recovery plan, however, contemplates returning some 4,000,000 or more workers to the ranks of the employed before winter, and contemplates substantially higher salary and wage scales in numerous lines.

"Replacement of obsolete items will doubtless involve a rising scale of individual purchases for some months ahead."

COTTON PRICES CUT AFTER EARLY RALLY

October Sells at 10.29 With General Market Down 4 to 9 Points.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Cotton fluctuated irregularly today, reflecting uncertainty over the international currency situation.

Early moderate advances on foreign and domestic trade buying attracted liquidation and Southern selling with the volume of business restricted. October closed at 10.29, with the general market closing 4 to 9 points net lower.

The market failed to respond to relatively firm Liverpool cables at the opening and aside from July, which was 5 points higher, initial prices were unchanged to 2 points lower, with the top barely steady. Commission houses were moderate sellers and there was also local, Southern and New Orleans selling apparently reflecting a disposition to liquidate accounts pending more definite reports concerning efforts at London to obtain currency stabilization.

Trade Price Fixing.

There was also considerable trade price fixing with the result that prices rallied to net gains of 2 to 10 points, with July selling up to 10.12 and December to 10.61.

All markets were nervous and when stocks and grains turned easier during the morning, Cotton also eased to net losses of 10 to 15 points, with July selling off to 9.95 and December to 10.38.

Wide changes in the dollar in terms of sterling added to the confusion. A private crop estimate pointed to an increase of 8.8 per cent in acreage and an indicated yield of 13,991,000 bales based on an end-June condition of 75 per cent. Exports today, 37,150, making 7,823,399 so far this season. Port receipts, 9,350. United States port stocks, 3,497,796.

CHEMICAL COMPANY EARNINGS $1,470,187

Collins & Aikman's Board Reports Net Profits of $3,315.

Midland, Mich., June 28 (A.P.).—Net earnings for the Dow Chemical Co. of $1,470,187 were announced for 1932 in the annual meeting here today. This represents an earning of $2 a share, compared with $2.95 a share a year ago. The dividend rate on common stock is $2 a share.

The company report also showed an increase in the ratio of company assets to liabilities from 3.19 to 1 last year, to 4.59 to 1 this year. The report recorded a 30 per cent increase in Dow metal sales, and a larger production of dyes and several other chemicals. All subsidiaries were operating at a profit, President Willard H. Dow said. The company announced a 10 per cent pay roll increase during the past year.

Willard H. Dow was reelected president; A. E. Convers was reelected chairman of the board, and all other officers and directors were retained.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Collins & Aikman Corporation reports net profit of $3,315 for the quarter ended May 27, against net loss of $109,666 for the same period of 1932.

The Metropolitan Edison Corporation, a unit of the Associated Gas & Electric System controlling electric and gas properties in eastern Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey, in its annual report for 1932 issued today shows consolidated gross operating revenues of $16,026,033 as compared with $17,007,587 in the previous year, a decline of 6.2 per cent. Operating expenses decreased 12 per cent from $5,788,667 to $5,078,570. Maintenance at $1,268,981 was 17 per cent higher than in the preceding 12 months, due principally to damage to transmission and distribution lines caused by snow and sleet storms early in last year. Taxes, at $854,030, were 17 per cent above the 1931 figure, a disturbing increase in view of declining revenues.

Thread Mills Take Revival Act Steps

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Cotton thread manufacturers have taken steps to organize their industry under the national industrial recovery act by the formation of the Thread Institute, it was announced today following a convention of manufacturers here. One of the first things done by the new institute was to empower its executive committee to draw up a code of fair competition to be presented to Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the recovery act, in the near future. A draft of the code has already been drawn up, together with a list of alleged abuses in the thread trade.

The Thread Institute was formed at the convention of the Cotton Thread Association, Inc., attended by more than 100 manufacturers. Officers of the institute were elected as follows: President, John B. Clark, New York; vice presidents, Josef Pollack and Peter J. Hinds, New York; secretary, W. R. L. McBee, South Willington, Conn.; treasurer, C. E. Chaffin, Springfield, Mass.

Among the members of the newly formed institute are Collingsbourne Mills, Inc., Elgin, Ill.; Dean & Sherk Co., Inc., Lawrenceburg, Ky.; Union Thread Co., Cincinnati, and more than a score of New York and Eastern firms.

2 Large Bond Offerings Appearing in New York

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Two large bond offerings, one of New York State issues and the other of the Dominion of Canada, made their appearance in the market today.

The larger consisted of $60,000,000 Dominion of Canada 15-month 4 per cent notes, due October 1, 1934, at a price of 99¾. A syndicate headed by the Chase National Bank offered these notes together with $26,595,000 State of New York 2¾ per cent and 3 per cent bonds, due 1934 to 1938, at prices to yield from 1 per cent to 3.05 per cent.

$150,000,000 Drug Group to Dissolve

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Dissolution of the $150,000,000 company, Drug, Inc., and reestablishment of its underlying companies as independent corporate units were recommended today by the directors. At the same time, A. H. Diebold, president of Drug, issued a call for a special meeting of stockholders on August 7 for consideration of the plan, which provides that the shareholders will receive pro rata shares in five new corporations.

Terms of exchange provide that a holder of ten shares of Drug will receive the following securities: Five shares of Sterling Products, four shares of United Drug, two shares of Vick Chemical, two shares of Bristol-Myers and one share of Life Savers.

The decision to dissolve the big holding company, which has been a prominent factor in the drug industry since its organization in 1928, was based, said Diebold in his letter, on a belief of directors "that the unique character of the drug industry is such that independent units can function more effectively than under the sole ownership of a holding corporation such as Drug, Inc., which contains subsidiaries and subsubsidiaries, each with diverse problems and objectives."

$3,350,000 SOUGHT FOR POTOMAC SPAN

$343,000 Toll Revenue Is Claimed by Proponents in Prince Georges.

An appropriation of 3,350,000 from the Federal public works fund for construction of the proposed Potomac River bridge in Southern Maryland was asked yesterday at a hearing before Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, Fifth Maryland Congressional District, at Upper Marlboro.

Mr. Gambrill, with J. H. Walton and H. C. Byrd, vice president of the University of Maryland, who comprised the executive body of Gov. Ritchie's committee, heard petitions for five other appropriations.

The petitions will be decided upon at a meeting of the full committee July 6. The favored projects will then be submitted to the Public Works Administrator of Maryland for final decision.

$343,000 Toll Revenue.

The bridge would open a new highway from Philadelphia and Baltimore through to Richmond and Norfolk, without passing through Washington. A toll charge would bring $343,000 in revenue the first year, it is believed, with an increase every year for five years.

Following the bridge proposal, Mayor W. A. Carson, of Riverdale, Md., asked that an overhead railroad crossing be granted the town to eliminate the present grade crossing at Jefferson avenue. The proposed crossing would be built at Cleveland avenue.

Colmar Manor was represented by Mayor Burt M. Bromley, who asked that an underpass below the Baltimore Boulevard be granted. It was explained that the boulevard divides Colmar Manor from Cottage City, where the community school is located.

Lanham-Severn Road.

T. Howard Duckett, head of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, asked that $650,000 be appropriated the commission for the extension of water mains and sewerage work in the metropolitan area.

States Senator Joseph L. Donovan, of Howard County, suggested that the county be allowed a fund to improve the water works system of Ellicott City. J. J. T. Graham, president of the Lanham-Severn Road Association, appealed for funds to complete the projected road between the two towns.

The final petition was made by C. D. Anderson, Hyattsville town councilman, for the establishment of a postoffice distributing center in the town. With the present system, Anderson said, mail in the metropolitan area requires 24 hours for distribution from one town to another.

The sum allotted to Maryland by the public works act is between $45,000,000 and $55,000,000.

Home Owners' Aid In Virginia Named

Virginians who want the Government to refinance mortgages on their homes should apply to John J. Wicker, jr., at Richmond, it was announced yesterday by the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Mr. Wicker was one of eight State managers appointed for the corporation. Others were Frank Milwee, Little Rock, Ark.; W. M. Price, Topeka, Kans.; W. T. Beckham, Louisville, Ky.; John S. Hamilton, Detroit, Mich.; Almer O. Steensland, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; James Shaw, Dallas, Tex., and A. R. McMicken, Casper, Wyo.

The Virginia manager will be supplied with application forms for refinancing when he takes office, and will also receive applications for corporation jobs in Virginia. Homes to be refinanced must be worth not more than $20,000 and be mortgaged for not more than $15,000. They must also be faced with foreclosure. In the refinancing scheme the mortgage holder will receive bonds of the corporation for the amount of the mortgage, which the corporation will take over.

ARLINGTON SCHOOL BOARD TO PAY LOAN

Is Confident County Rulers Will Grant $32,000 to Meet Balance.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Confident that the county board, at its meeting today, will grant the request of the school board for a loan of $32,000, the school board will hold a special meeting tonight to arrange to pay off the balance of a floating debt inherited from its predecessor.

The loan it seeks is from the surplus in the county fund, and it is pointed out that it will mean saving considerable interest.

To help keep expenses within the budget, the board has decided to cut off gas, electricity and telephone service in all of the county schools during the summer.

HEADS OF W.C.T.U. ASK ENFORCEMENT

Directors Demand That 18th Amendment Be Obeyed While It Is Law.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 29 (A.P.).—Directors of the Women's Christian Temperance Union today called on States which have voted to repeal the eighteenth amendment to enforce its provisions as long as it remains in the Constitution.

Directors preparing the program of the national convention which starts tomorrow deplored a disposition in some communities to assume that prohibition is no longer the law of the land because 16 States have voted against it.

They will ask the general convention to demand a last ditch enforcement program.

The child labor amendment to the Constitution has been approved by many States, but because it has not yet been accepted by 36 States children still labor in sweat shops, a resolution of the directors will say. If the child labor amendment can not be anticipated by human conduct the repeal of prohibition can not be regarded a fact until it is accomplished, the directors contended.

Nor is any one justified in assuming at this stage that repeal will be accomplished, militant organization leaders contended.

The fact that sixteen States have voted for repeal is no cause for discouragement, said Mrs. Ella Boole, of Brooklyn, national president, who was among the early arrivals.

With a few exceptions, States which so far have voted on the repeal proposal were conceded to be wet, Mrs. Boole said. She said the South would stem the repeal tide. Prohibitionists, she said, have a fighting chance in at least 20 States.

She was supported by Mrs. Sarah N. Hoge, Lincoln, Va., recording secretary of the national group and president of the Virginia chapter of the organization.

Evicted Family Given Home By Penny Restaurant Head

Jobless Blacksmith, Wife and Four Children Unable to Pay Rent Are Aided by Oliver Harr, Social Worker, and Transfer Company.

Homeless yesterday, with their few earthly belongings unceremoniously dumped in the street, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cady and their four young children today once more have a roof over their heads at 1120 Four-and-a-Half street southwest, thanks to the intervention of Oliver Harr, operator of the Penny Restaurant, 625 Pennsylvania avenue.

The plight of the Cady family was brought to Mr. Harr's attention by Mrs. A. M. Minnix, social worker in the Ninth Precinct. They were evicted from their home in the 300 block of Sixth street southeast Wednesday for failure to pay six months' back rent.

Mr. Cady, an expert blacksmith, has been out of work for more than a year. Two days' work a week at Emergency Relief Division, Public Welfare, couldn't pay the rent and feed six hungry mouths, he found.

The family was lodged Wednesday night at the Salvation Army, but until Mr. Herr came to their rescue yesterday with payment of a month's rent at their new home, they didn't know where they would find permanent shelter.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, of the Smith Transfer Co., donated the use of two trucks to move the family's furniture.

The children are Josephine, 8; Robert, 9; Richard, 10, and Margaret, 12. Mr. Cady says he will do any kind of work to get enough money to feed his youngsters.

SMITH TELLS CLUB EMPLOYES ARE SAFE

Administration Plans No Attack on Regulars in Civil Service.

J. Bond Smith, president of the newly formed organization, told the first public meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park last night that the club plans no attack on the rank and file of civil service employes. He explained that only officeholders who have been appointed because of political endeavors in behalf of the Republican party are to be attacked.

Mr. Smith declared that the American people had given the Democratic party a mandate and that the only way it could be carried out was to place Democrats in sympathy with the administration in key positions of the Government. He said that Republicans who had been appointed by the outgoing administration obviously could not be sympathetic with the present administration.

Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department, declared that the civil service is a fine thing and that it was established by Democrats, but that keymen in the Government must be in sympathy with the administration. E. Barrett Prettyman, general counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, detailed the efforts being made by the administration to restore normalcy.

Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, declared that whenever the country needs a real prime minister who can lead, it turns to the Democratic party. He said that the President must have the Federal machinery geared to work with him, and that this is impossible without good Democrats in key positions. He alleged that President Hoover had blanketed into the civil service 5,000 persons who had not been appointed as the result of competitive examinations. Maj. E. Brooke Lee, county Democratic leader, congratulated the club on its fine showing and outlined the national recovery policies of the administration.

Chevy Chase Unit Hears of Parade

The Chevy Chase Volunteer Fire Department was the first volunteer department to be informed that The Washington Post has come to the rescue of the firemen and agreed to sponsor the annual Labor Day Firemen's Parade, Sergt A. J. Bargagni and Eddy Gilmore, of the Post, talked before the department at its meeting in the firehouse last night.

The Chevy Chase Department took no formal action as it had not been officially invited, but it was the consensus that the Chevy Chase men will parade. Ralph Chase, member of the Chevy Chase Fire Board, talked to the volunteers and urged close cooperation with the paid department. He said that the fire board is sympathetic with the volunteers and willing to hear any plans they have to offer.

The firemen voted to attend the parades of the Cabin John Park and Kensington Volunteer Fire Departments on the Fourth of July and voted to send Mrs. Robert Dunlop as the department's representative at a beauty contest to be held by the Ellicott City Fire Department.

Hearing Is Held On Beer Permits

Hearings were held yesterday at Rockville by the Maryland State License Bureau on three applications for permits to sell beer in the Damascus district of Montgomery County which had been protested by residents of the area.

The applications heard were those of Lacy A. Farley, Cedar Grove; Myrtle Poole, Poole's Inn, Germantown, and Arthur L. Watkins, Cedar Grove. They were opposed on the ground that there is no necessity for the public convenience that sale of beer be allowed.

The beer board has heard practically all of the 63 protested applications in Maryland. It now has but two hearings at Annapolis to complete and has acted on all except five.

Anti-Trust Law Submerged To Put Millions to Working

Industries Drafting Codes to Boost Buying Power Under Recovery Act.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles prepared by staff writers of the Associated Press to explain in simple terms the important laws enacted at the last session of Congress, in President Roosevelt's recovery program.)

The first task of objective under the national recovery law is to get more money into the hands of the people, so they may buy more goods, so stores and factories will hire millions of the unemployed to meet the demand.

To do this, the law makes possible a cut in the number of hours now worked by men with jobs. Others then will have to be hired to do part of the work. At the same time the rate of pay is to be increased, so that, working less time, men will still make a living wage or better, and be able to spend enough to help business make jobs for yet more men.

The law lets all businesses in the same line get together and voluntarily agree to do this. The procedure for accomplishing the objective is:

A representatitve group of one industry drafts a code of fair competition. Since enactment of the Sherman antitrust law in 1890 companies in the same line have been prevented from getting together, but the national recovery act allows it for two years.

The code, for the present, is only to set the minimum wage that the industry may pay, and fix the maximum hours that any employe shall work, with, possibly, provisions forbidding selling below cost of production, to eliminate "sweatshop" competition.

This agreement is submitted to Maj. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator, who calls for a public hearing at which minorities within the industry, representatives of labor and representatives of the buying public may suggest changes to meet their needs.

The law permits employes the right to organize any way they choose, and their employers are forbidden to interfere.

Gen. Johnson is aided, in considering the agreements, by three boards: One of industrialists, one of labor experts and the third representing consumers. Each must advise from the viewpoint it represents.

When they agree upon terms of the code, it is up to Gen. Johnson. When he approves, it passes to President Roosevelt who has reserved final say on all agreements. Once the codes are promulgated they have the force of law, so all plants within the specified industries must abide by their terms.

If any firm refuses to act under its industry's code, the President can compel it to do so by requiring the whole industry to take out licenses, closing down the plant which does not qualify for one by accepting the code.

If any industry refuses to adopt a code, the Government may frame one and order it enforced.

While increasing wages and jobs is the emergency phase of the law, later the codes may be expanded to outlaw unfair competition.

ALEXANDRIA KILLS LOCAL LIQUOR LAW

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria City Council last night repealed the city prohibition ordinance, with the result that violations of the dry law will, in future, be prosecuted under the State law, the State will collect all fines, and care for all prisoners. The city manager, under instructions from the council, investigated the cost of maintaining prisoners and found that for the 17 months prior to January 1, 1933, the revenue from fines had amounted to $16,454.25, while the expenses of maintaining prisoners was $22,002.20, or a loss to the city of $5,547.95. For the five months in 1933 the cost was $5,085.40, with fines of only $2,899.30, or a loss of $2,186.10. Councilman Barley, therefore, moved the repeal of the dry ordinance, effective immediately. The city ordinance affecting charges of drunkenness was, however, continued.

Councilman Davison suggested that, since the repeal of the State law prohibiting the sale of 3.2 beer appears imminent, the city adopt an ordinance taxing such beer sales. City Attorney Budweasky, however, suggested that this be held in abeyance, since the new State law probably would provide a maximum tax for beer to be imposed by cities and towns.

Tax List Withheld.

The publication of the delinquent tax list, which had been set for the week of July 10, was postponed until September. Several of the councilmen stated they had received letters of protest, and Councilmen Davison and Cooper stated they had been under a misapprehension; that they understood the advertisement would simply give the list of delinquents and amounts, instead of advertising the properties for sale, as contemplated by the recent resolution.

The ordnance providing for the rezoning of the 1200 block of Prince street from commergial to residential, was adopted, and the request of a resident for a permit to conduct a store in this block was denied. The city manager and city attorney were instructed to settle a claim made by this resident for $156.50, for not exceeding $96.50, to cover expenses incurred by him in anticipation of being granted a permit.

A request of Preston Merchant, of the 800 block, South Washington street, for repairs to his property by the city, to compensate for the lowering of the grade, was covered by instructions to the city manager to construct steps and a concrete platform at a cost of $75.

Construction Authorized.

The council authorized the construction of the Russell road sewer from Mount Vernon avenue to the Braddock sewer, at a cost of $9,500. The city manager submitted an estimate of cost of a sewer on Wolfe street, 275 feet east of Alfred street, of $550, but this was held over.

The city manager reported that the State Welfare Association has made available for Alexandria, out of Federal funds, $3,983 for immediate use; that $3,500 will be available shortly, and later in the year there will be $7,000 more available, subject to certain conditions, one of which is that a city welfare director shall be appointed, not a resident of Alexandria, who shall be approved by the State welfare director, to administer this fund. It was shown that this would not mean disregarding the present local welfare officials, and the council instructed the city manager to convey the thanks of the council to the welfare body for its splendid work in the past.

Councilman Barley introduced a resolution, which was approved, to request the State Highway Commission to reconstruct U. S. Route No. 1, from Raymond avenue to the overhead bridge, to a width of 28 feet with 5-foot concrete shoulders; and to construct a road from Duke street to Kats Corner through the western part of the city to connect with the Memorial Bridge route, to be built with funds received from the United States Government.

An ordinance amending the city milk ordinance, and providing for a better grade of milk to be furnished in the city, and an amendment to the ice cream ordinance, were held over.

Murder Defendant Denies Arson Plot

Cleveland, June 29 (A.P.).—Ray I. Turk, charged with murder in connection with the Ellington Apartment blaze, testified in his own defense today that he had no knowledge whatever "of the origin of the fire" in which 12 persons burned to death a year ago.

The charge of murder is based on the State's allegation that he conspired with a Pittsburgh arson ring to fire his barber and beauty supply shop in the Ellington Building to collect insurance.

Turk said he went to Youngstown about January 15, shortly before his arrest, not because he felt he might be arrested in connection with the fire, but because he wanted to talk with the head of a barber supply concern about buying the business. He then went to Ashland to see about getting money for the deal and learned there he was wanted, Turk testified.

He started back for Cleveland, but stopped in Akron to wait until he could establish communication with his attorney, he said, and was arrested there.

Dr. James R. Withrow, of Ohio State University, was called as a defense witness and testified the explosion which set off the fire was not on the ground floor, where Turk's shop was located.

GAIN IN UTILITY UNIT NET EARNING BARED

Cities Service Subsidiary in Colorado Rose From 7.4 to 10.79 Per Cent.

(United Press.)

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday revealed the net earning on capital invested in the Public Service Co. of Colorado, a Cities Service subsidiary, increased from 7.40 per cent in 1924 to 10.79 per cent in 1930.

Roger E. Barnes, an accountant for the commission, who investigated the subsidiary's books, testified depreciation charges had been deducted in figuring the 3.39 per cent increase. Before the depreciation charges were deducted the net earnings were 10.12 per cent in 1924 and 12.01 in 1930.

Write-ups in asset values and holding company profits were eliminated in figuring the net returns, Barnes said.

Barnes also reported there had been a marked increase in the management fees paid Cities Service Co. by the Colorado utility. These management fees increased from $145,163 in 1924, when the gross earnings of the company were $8,412,517 to $234,505 in 1930, when the gross earnings were $13,400,314.

The operating and maintenance expenses in 1924 were $4,902,074 and were $6,194,536 in 1930.

The total net earning before interest charges were deducted amounted to $3,774,665 in 1924 and $6,527,353 in 1930. After interest charges of $2,929,615 in 1924 and $3,000,382 in 1930 and income taxes of $104,324 in 1924 and $370,617 in 1930 were deducted the net earnings available for dividends to stockholders were $743,815 in 1924 and $3,152,354 in 1930.

The Colorado Corporation paid taxes amounting to $658,984 in 1924 and $1,245,777 in 1930.

Forestry Tear Gas Action Is Dropped

Believing that the action of a deputy sheriff in firing tear gas at a group of reforestation workers near Luray, Va., was unwarranted, Army officers and Civilian Conservation Corps officials yesterday agreed to take no action against the workers involved.

Sheriff Luther G. Sheetz, who led the deputies in the encounter at the Luray camp, still claims that he acted only in self-defense. According to his story, the men were cursing him and menacing his men with rocks.

Charles Taylor, assistant director of the corps, yesterday reported to Director Robert Fechner that all was now quiet at the camp. Several minor changes in arrangements have been made and the men seem satisfied. Lieut. Col. George W. P. Whiting, regional supervisor for the district, said that the Army would take no further action against the workers. The strike at the camp, which resulted in Sheriff Sheetz being called, was blamed by the men on the food, although officials blamed agitators among the men. Two of these disturbers have left the camp.

Auto Installment Sales Drop Largely in 1932

Fewer automobiles, both new and used, were sold on the installment plan during 1932 than in any year since 1925, according to the District Division of the American Automobile Association.

The statement also said: "The slightest upturn in business conditions, already seen in many lines of business and industry, is certain to increase auto sales."

Rough-Rider Hat Emblems Are Presented to 125 at Camp Roosevelt.

EACH of the 126 Scouts enrolled at Camp Roosevelt were presented with an embroidered emblem of a rough rider hat, symbolic of the youthful days of Theodore Roosevelt, at their campfire Tuesday night. These emblems are to be worn on the Scout shirt and signify their membership in the camp.

Camp Roosevelt is organized into various troops, named after places or events in the life of Roosevelt. The Buckskin Troop is occupied by the Scouts of Troop 27, William Rhorer, scoutmaster, with William Hunt as troop leader. The Big Horn Ranch is occupied by Troop 211, of Bethesda, Guy Earley scoutmaster, with Reisner Lindsay as troop leader. Power River Ranch is occupied by Troop 96, John Jacobs, scoutmaster, with Harold Boesch as troop leader. Chimney Butte Ranch has Joe Rose as its troop leader and Elkhorn Ranch is under the leadership of Houstan Buchanan.

Troop 620, under the leadership of Assistant Scoutmaster Joseph Flowers, is conducting a troop camp at the site of the older boys' camp.

Fishing and crabbing parties have been popular, with some unusual catches already this year.

It is expected that a large delegation of parents and friends will spend July 4 at camp and a special array of fireworks is being arranged.

Tom Keane to Conduct Course.

Thomas J. Keane, national Sea Scout director, will conduct a short course in older boy leadership at Camp Roosevelt on July 29 and 30. It is expected that about 60 scoutmaster and district commissioners will spend the week-end at camp participating in the course. Mr. Keane is a national authority on older boy programs and has recently published a Scouting best seller, "Lubbers Afloat."

Boy Scouts have been assigned important parts in Washington's Fourth of July celebration. Scouts holding 13 flags, symbolic of the 13 original colonies; will stand behind the stage at the Sylvan Theater. In addition 32 Scouts bearing torches will occupy positions behind the line of march, lining the procession.

Seats are being reserved for Scouts taking part in the processional and the massing of colors. All Scouts are asked to report at the west side of the Monument not later than 7:30 p. m., July 4, completely uniformed, including hats and sleeves rolled down. The Fourth of July celebration is only one of many civic events in which Scouts will participate this summer.

An eagle badge, symbol of Scouting's highest rank, will be presented to Wellington Wayland Friday night at the parents' night meeting of Troop 126, conducted by the Second Presbyterian Church, of Alexandria, Va. William Jefferies will recieve his life badge and Edmund H. Roberts his star award. Walter MacPeek, educational director of the District of Columbia Boy Scout Council, will address the gathering and present the awards.

The first issue of Camp Roosevelt's paper, the Rough Rider, appeared on June 25, with Joe Rose as editor and Jack Splain as associate editor. This is the twelfth year of publication. The Rough Rider appears each Sunday during the camping season. Its first issue reviewed the members of the camp staff and gave their qualifications as leaders.

The boating department has announced that scouts who passed their boating test last year will not be required to repeat again this year, but will be subject only to a short review. A good opportunity is now open to work for the canoeing merit badge, the paper stated.

Handicraft, under the direction of "Stu" Fred Stuart, will offer an opportunity for all types of handicraft from bondoggles to bows and arrows.

Offers Dan Beard Award.

The Nation nut tree planting committee has devised an award to be given to Scouts and scouters who participate to the greatest extent in the three planting program. The award will be known as the Dan Beard Award for Service on Conservation.

Awards will be given individuals and troops gathering the largest amounts of nut seeds. This project will be judged on: 1, By the quantity of seeds gathered; 2, By the kind of program put on by the troops when the seeds are assembled.

Scouts who distribute the most seeds, or a specified number, or to the greatest number or a specified number of persons, will also receive an award, subject to the approval of the council and the committee. This project will be judged on the basis of the troops devising plans giving unusual community service.

Those groups having the best exchange program, gathering, exchange, and planting will be awarded the prize. Those planting the greatest number of seeds, and the troops sponsoring the best programs will be awarded also.

Awards will be made for the finest variety of nut seeds discovered. They will be judged locally by foresters, county agents or nurserymen. The finest will be sent to Washington so that the Northern Nut Growers Association may pick the best for a prize.

District of Columbia Boy Scouts have already planted several historical trees in the National Historical Grove in Anacostia Park.

Seven kinds of fellows who should not come to camp:

1. Fellows who do not like good eats.
2. Scouts who do not like to have fun.
3. Fellows who don't want to make new friends.
4. Scouts who feel no thrill as the campfire leaps high.
5. Fellows who don't like to swim in the cool water.
6. Fellows who don't get any kick out of canoeing and sailing.
7. Fellows who already know everything about nature and handicraft.

Of course, there aren't any such fellows.

STILL TIME TO REGISTER FOR SECOND WEEK AT ROOSEVELT

Many More to Register for Succeeding Weeks.

You'll have to move fast, Mr. Scout, if you are going to get your registrations filed for the second week at Camp Roosevelt. But if you rush it in today or tomorrow you'll just be able to squeeze in on this week, for which new arrivals will come on Sunday and Monday.

Troop 72, Church of the Pilgrims, publishes a troop paper called the Live Wire. In the June issue, which contained 10 pages, hikes, Camp Roosevelt, nature, stars, "The White Ants of Africa," scouting news, poems and all kinds of scout craft featured the paper. James Seller is the editor of the Live Wire. The June issue of the Live Wire was the closing one until the fall.

Troop 10, conducted by the Ninth Street Christian Church, as usual will "carry on" during the vacation days. It held its last formal meeting last Friday night, but will enjoy all sorts of informal troop functions throughout the summer.

A number of Troop 10 have enrolled for Camp Roosevelt, for the second period, and are looking forward to that time with great anticipation. Scout Woodyard is attending the fair in Chicago, several others have already left the city, while others are planning to attend Camp Wilson.

Troop 10 marched as a unit in the recent parade of the Northeast Business Men's Association.

Scout Emitt Witt was awarded the bronze palm, and Scouts Thomas Poland and Edward Clark were advanced to Life Scouts at the recent court of awards.

The troop spent the week-end at Shady Nook, Kenwood Beach, the guests of Assistant Scoutmaster Dodge. Swimming, crabbing and other sports were the order of the day.—(Contributed by L. L. Shefrey, Scoutmaster Troop 10).

The Scouts of Troop 56, conducted by Peck Memorial Chapel, went to Rock Creek Park and held their meeting on Friday, June 23. The meeting was interesting and plans were made for going to camp this summer. After the meeting Scoutmaster H. C. Tucker told an interesting Indian story.

Troop 38, conducted by the Takoma Park Trinity Episcopal Church, will continue to hold meetings throughout the summer months, with plenty of activity. Last Friday night the troop met at Camp Wilson and held a marshmallow toast. Next Friday night the troop will meet in Rock Creek Park at Sherrill and Beach drive, after which meeting a wiener roast will be held. On the following Wednesday the troop will spend the day at Marshall Hall. The following Friday the troop will meet at Camp Wilson and spend the week at this camp for the purpose of advancing each Scout to the next rank. Each week there will be something very special at the meeting.

The newly organized Troop 221 at the Presbyterian Church in Riverdale, Md., held a joint meeting last Friday, with the Men's Brotherhood, which is sponsoring the troop. Twenty-one tenderfoot scouts were presented with scout badges during an evening of scouting demonstration, games and program of music furnished by the Scouts. This is a two-month-old troop and excellent progress was reported to the troop committee.

The troop plans a Scout family picnic in Rock Creek Park and a Scout and dad swim on Chesapeake Bay soon. The Panther Patrol has decided to build a troop motor trailer under direction of the scoutmaster, Mr. Williams, as a patrol project. The troop committee has offered a substantial prize to the patrol building the best known board for the troop meeting room.

The week-end troop camps and one troop swim have been held since organization.

The troop has 27 registered Scouts with four patrols organized.

Troop officers and leaders are as follows: Louis W. Carter, scoutmaster; J. W. Williams, assistant scoutmaster; Jesse Geiser, senior patrol leader; Thomas Field, patrol leader; Karl Krauss, patrol leader; Billy Bosh, patrol leader; Richard Ballinger, patrol leader, and Billy Kimmer, troop scribe.

A grand total membership of 900,602 is shown in the membership report of the Boy Scouts of America, as of April 30, according to figures received today at District Boy Scout Headquarters.

The figures show 29,633 groups of Scouts, Sea Scouts and Cubs. There are 633,914 land Scouts; 16,492 Sea Scouts; 2,837 Lone Scouts; 241,913 Scouters; 30,263 Cubs; 7,081 Cubbers. Grand total membership (exclusive of duplications) 900,602.

Reasons for Going to Camp.

Howard Ennes says:

"Camp Roosevelt, the summer camp of the District Boy Scouts, at Willows, Md., on Chesapeake Bay, offers many appeals to scouts. The reasons why scouts go to camp are varied, but most of them attend for the purpose of advancing in rank. Let's hear a few first-hand reasons for going to camp. We'll ask some scouts from Troop 79.

"Second Class Scout William Darling is going to camp 'to finish up his first class tests, to get handicraft instruction and to get his camp letters.'

Patrol Leader Frank McInturff wants to go to camp because of handicraft, swimming and the fun and training in leadership it offers.

"Another second class Scout, William Anderson, is going to camp to get his first-class tests cleared up, for swimming, and for instruction in all of the Scout lore taught at camp, handicraft, nature, boating and pioneering.

"Senior Patrol Leader Howard Ennes wants to go to camp to develop his leadership ability, to get instruction in merit badges and Scout lore.

"A scoutmaster of many, many summers, Edwin L. Maschmeyer, of Troop 79, is going to camp because he loves it, to help the boys, and to learn more scoutcraft. Mr. Maschmeyer has been going to camp since 1923 and helped build the mess shack. He will receive his ten-year camp letters this year.

"Every scout who goes to camp may have a different taste for scouting, and may want different things, but in all probability he can get what he wants at camp.

"All types of Scout lore are taught at camp. Such lore as handicraft, boating, swimming, nature, pioneering, test passing and merit badges are taught at this complete camp. A Scout will lose nothing by going to camp and he will gain much."

Handicraft Leads in 79.

Handicraft is to be the main feature of Troop 79's summer program. The troop room in the Albright Memorial Church is to be decorated with totem poles and other Indian craft to liven up the leaders' corner. Patrols are working on their corners to see which patrol will turn out the best-looking job. No reports have come from the Panther, Bat, or Beaver patrols, but the Blackfoot Patrol has already embarked upon a large handicraft program. It will consist entirely of Indiancraft, as the name of the patrol implies.

Last week the honor patrol flag, awarded to the winning patrol each week, was won again by the Panthers. The Blackfoot Patrol, however, was a close second.

SCOUTIN' ABOUT
With Will E. Quill.

More tanned than ever, and bubbling over with tales of the good times they had, more than 50 fathers and sons of Troop 33, Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, returned Monday evening from their annual three-day trek to Pine Grove Furnace, in the Michaux State Forest in Pennsylvania. Troop 33 goes on many hikes, but there is only one father and son trek each year.

In the baseball game between fathers and sons the dads won. But the boys are saying "next year we'll be older—and so will they."

A water polo game featured the Monday morning program. Bean hole beans baked under the campfire were a feature of the menu.

"Only 360 more days till the next dads and sons trek," the Scouts in 33 are saying.

Scouts will be the guests of the management of the Metropolitan Theater on Monday evening, July 10, to see the picture, "Forgotten Men." The group will assemble at 6:30 p. m., at Franklin Square, Fourteenth and I streets, and proceed to the theater in a body.

All over Washington Scouts are looking forward to Scout Day at Glen Echo, where on July 18 they will splash to their hearts' content in the Crystal Pool. Opportunities will be given to qualify for membership in the Minnow, Porpoise, or Whale Aquatic Club. It is expected that several hundred Scouts will attend.

Take advantage, Scouts, of the chance to live at Camp Wilson, at Burnt Mills, Md. Go out to the camp for a day, for a few days, or for a few weeks. You will have the time of your life, make a lot of new friends and advance in your Scouting knowledge.

Scouts who are going to Camp Roosevelt should stop in at Scout headquarters, 1103 Vermont avenue, for their physical examination, at 7:30 p. m. on the Thursday before going to camp.

Dozens of opportunities are presented to Scouts during the summer months. It is necessary that you present an unexpired membership card to take advantage of these events. Courts every Saturday night at Wilson; "Forgotten Men" at the Metropolitan; Glen Echo day; all these events will require a uniform when possible and an unexpired membership card—always.

There is no reason why Scouts should not continue their advancement throughout the summer months. Courts of review and honor every Saturday night at Camp Wilson.

Officials at Community Chest headquarters tell us that thirteen Scouts did a 100 per cent job on distribution of "designation" slips to member agencies Monday.

The Scouts on duty were Anson Riggs, John Rogers, Warren Davis, Harold Earp, Robert Geran, of Troop 38; Harney Larrick, Bill Gerns, Thurston Jacobs, Lionel LaGuardia and William Swanson, Troop 72; Wilber Hummer and Robert Kelly, Troop 60, and Henry Sanders, Troop 10.

Every Friday

What is new in your troop? Lots of things, of course, but why keep them secret? Write up the news of your troop and mail it at once to Merit B. Scout, Boy Scout Headquarters, 1103 Vermont avenue. It will then appear in this column every Friday morning.

TENNYSON EVENING DELIGHTS ARTS CLUB

Charles Edward Russell Defends Poet and Play Reveals Dramatist.

Debunking the modern tendency to foist charges of "saccharine sentimentalism" upon the work of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, Charles Edward Russell, noted Washington author-lecturer and patron of the fine arts, speaking before the Arts Club last evening, declared that there was no poet of the English language who was so conscious and impeccable an artist in melodic expression.

The short address of Mr. Russell opened a "Tennyson Evening," followed by Adelaide Borah reading the tragic "Lament of Oenone" and the Arts Club dramatic committee presenting the one-act play, "The Falcon."

In Oenone's lament Miss Borah was excellent, drawing from the poet's blank verse all the inherent pathos of the sad culmination of the love of Oenone for Paris, who had deserted her for Helen of Troy.

As he is not generally regarded in the popular mind as a dramatist, the presentation of Tennyson's "The Falcon" was an eye-opener. This metrical rendition of a Boccaccio story revolves around the love of Count Federigo for the Lady Giovanna, the gratificaton of whose every whim has impoverished him. Finally, she asks for his beloved falcon, but that her ladyship might breakfast he has killed it, and from that episode the reality of love is born.

The proud possessor of the falcon was Maurice Jarvis, whose delineation of the count marked the histrionic high spot of the evening. But as the "gold-digging" Mona Giovanna, Caroline McKinley must be considered as offering close competition. Her part is, at first, none too commendable, but as the play progresses, milady proves that she is not as devoid of human kindness as might have been supposed. Supporting these two stellar thespians were J. Martin Scranage, as the count's foster brother and major-domo of the much-reduced household, and Elizabeth Baldwin, as the count's nurse and faithful attendant.

Presented in the garden of the Arts Club, "The Falcon" will be thrice well-remembered; a superbly constructed play by one not generally thought a playwright, a practically inspired cast reading its blank verse with no taint of scanning, and a generally charming evening in delightful spot.

Film Industries To Submit Codes

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Two organizations representing independent motion picture interests said today they would submit codes of fair trade practices for the film industry to the Industrial Recovery Administration. The groups, organized to outlaw block booking, are acting independently from the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, which Will Hays heads.

The Independent Theater Owners Association of Greater New York announced that 1,100 owners have been asked to meet here tomorrow to name a committee to draft a code.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry made public a summary of a code which it said "will not be found by the independent theater owners at variance with their aims and aspirations."

'Doc' Sanders, Drug Peddlers' Nemesis, Retires From Force

SERGT. R. A. SANDERS.

Detective Sergeant R. A. "Doc" Sanders, nemesis of drug peddlers, quack physicians and hosts of assorted fakers, will answer roll call at police headquarters for the last time tonight.

Tomorrow "Doc" Sanders closes a police career of 35 years, of which span 26 years have been served as head of the headquarters narcotic squad. District Commissioners have approved the veteran's retirement on a pension basis. He is 60 years old. "Doc" has been in ill health for several years.

Probably thousands of pharmacists, dentists, physicians and policemen know "Doc" Sanders. Generations of newspapermen have known him and liked him, though he was almost habitually "tight as a clam" when it came to giving out news.

Known Throughout Nation.

"Doc" Sanders is known throughout the Nation to Federal narcotic investigators and officials. His advice has often been sought by young narcotic officials just breaking in.

A compendium of knowledge of human beings leaves the Police Department with "Doc" Sanders' departure. He has, to an amazing degree, that faculty of sizing up people at a glance. Talking with him, this man who has trailed drug rings and quack doctors, who has listened to the maunderings of scores of "hop" crazed addicts, one gathers that an abiding tolerance has come with the years.

Washington, says "Doc" Sanders, has little local drug activity. Addicts are fewer here than in other cities, he says. But from this city at times in the past great national drug rings have radiated their sinister wares and the veteran detective has played a big part in aiding Federal operatives to round them up.

Patrolled Famed Beat.

Joining the force in April, 1898, "Doc" Sanders patrolled the famous Swampoodle beat in the old Sixth Precinct for several years. Later he was assigned to duty at the old depot at Sixth street. Pressed by interviewers, he will reluctantly detail several exciting hand-to-hand battles with armed men.

The veteran detective was assigned to the narcotic enforcement work in 1907. This was later expanded to law enforcement coverage of the entire medical profession in the city, pharmacy and optometry. The District Board of Optometry yesterday wrote the police department a letter lauding "Doc" Sanders' work and expressing regret at his retirement.

The retiring detective lives at 12 S street northeast. There are four grown children, all married, and Mr. and Mrs. Sanders live alone. He has made no plans for the future, except rest, he said last night.

STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL IS INJURED

H. Freeman Matthews Suffers Broken Skull as His Car Hits Pole.

H. Freeman Matthews, assistant division chief of the State Department, is in a critical condition in an Ossining (N.Y.) hospital, following an automobile accident near Tarrytown, N. Y., it was learned here yesterday. Members of his family left last night to be at his bedside.

According to an Associated Press report, Matthews suffered a fractured skull when his machine careened from the road and crashed into a pole. He lost control, reports said, in attempting to avoid striking another car.

Mr. Matthews is 34 years old. He is assistant chief of the division of Latin American Affairs. He has been in the State Department's foreign service since 1923 and held secretarial posts at Budapest, Hungary and Bogota.

LOANS READY HERE FOR HOME OWNERS

Federal Funds Can Be Used for Taxes and Various Improvements.

With the appointment of a District manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, Washington home owners will have a new source of funds for renovizing, it was announced yesterday by Arthur B. Heaton, general manager of the renovize Washington campaign.

Mr. Heaton said that an officer to handle the District applications for loans will be named by the Federal Home Loan Bank this week. Under the law authorizing this aid for home owners, the Government may advance up to 50 per cent of the appraised value of homes whose owners are in distress. This amount may include loans for improving homes, as well as for payment of taxes, Mr. Heaton said.

Plans are being completed for the opening of the Renovize Campaign Exposition on July 10 at 1435-37 K street northwest. Remodeling of the little house at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest will be completed by this time, it was announced.

American Pays $10,128 For Copy of Keat's Poem

London, June 29 (A.P.).—Another literary treasure from Lord Rosebery's library at Sotheby's auction rooms was taken today for the United States when Walter Hill, of Chicago, paid £2,400 (currently $10,128) for Keat's presentation copy of "Endyion" to Leigh Hunt, in 1818.

Dr. Gabriel Wells, New York collector, bought a first edition (1473) of "Imitation," by Thomas a Kempis for £529 (currently $2,194).

Man Brags of Wealth; Thieves Return for It

Los Angeles, June 29 (A.P.).—Recently after Charles Chaney's home had been burglarized, the produce dealer boasted that the burglars had overlooked $500 in cash and two diamond rings.

Last night the burglars returned. But they didn't overlook the valuables. They forced Chaney's bookkeeper to show them where to look.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With Nelson B. Bell

RUMBLINGS are beginning to filter through to the East that internecine warfare has broken out again in Hollywood.

The big chiefs are sharpening their tomahawks and getting out their war bonnets, and it is being surreptitiously whispered that some of them even are secretly poisoning their arrows!

Constance Bennett

It seems that the old battle cries are beginning to rend the air again as a result of the eagerness of President Joseph M. Schenck and Vice President Darryl Zanuck, of the newly formed Twentieth Century producing company, to build up a formidable group of stars in the shortest possible time.

To accompliah this end, they are being accused of having done a little systematic sniping at the rosters of their competitive associates. It is being charged, for example, that Loretta Young and George Arliss were signed on the dotted line almost before the Warner Brothers had realized that their options had not been taken up.

Constance Bennett, lured from the RKO lot by the same persuasive gestures, signed even a little ahead of the expiration of her current contract.

All this Twentieth Century is said to justify by the plea that it is not a signatory to the pact entered into by a group of the foremost producers a year or two ago, when the Warners, by a similar process, had acquired the services of Kay Francis, William Powell, Ruth Chatterton and a few others from the Paramount lot, whereby the proselyting of acting talent was made definitely taboo.

It apparently is Twentieth Century's view that they are dealing in the open market and have a right to purchase the services of anyone with services to sell. Their rivals assert that this attitude is inimical to the purposes of the agreement which ostensibly outlawed raiding each other's star lists.

And there the matter rests. Unless Will H. Hays is able to think up a good idea pertaining to the difficulty in hand, there seems to be nothing much that can be done about it—which is causing less consternation among the players than among the executives responsible for the payment of their salaries.

Hollywood has been engaged in a concentrated drive of late months to hammer down stellar salaries. With open warfare among the producers again a likelihood of some imminence, there would seem to be a fair promise of competitive bidding for the services of the more popular actors and actresses and a consequent boosting of their salaries back to a level where they once more will be aloof from any worry concerning the devastating ravages of the depression!

But, of course, it is just barely possible that Mr. Hays will be able to dig up that good idea and get the boys all comfortably squatted in a circle around the jolly old camp fire, pulling away at the pipe of peace.

If not, there will be fireworks long after the Fourth of July!

Not in months has such impetus been given a widespread and diverse public interest as has been occasioned by Emanuel Cohen's plea on behalf of Paramount for aid in casting the title role in that company's forthcoming production of Lewis Carroll's whimsical classic, "Alice in Wonderland."

Among the most recent of the many letters that have reached this desk in response to the publication of Mr. Cohen's appeal, one seems worthy of reproduction in full, not only because of the intrinsic worth of its suggestion but also because it reflects a sentiment that has been widely expressed by a large number of other correspondents. It follows:

"Dear Mr. Bell: After casting aside Marie Dressler, Greta Garbo, and Mae West as possible candidates for the part of Alice, I add my candidate to the already long list of 'ideal actresses to assume the role.'

"There will probably be much throwing up of hands and looking down the ends of noses at my nomination, partly because the actress I consider the ideal actress has been tragically typed as a broken reed, and partly because as winner of the Academy Award for the best performance of 1932 the 'simple' part of Alice might seem beneath her dramatic dignity. But I stoutly maintain, as I have always maintained since I first laid eyes on my favorite actress, that the only one who could give Alice the whimsy and childish gravity and quaint charm she should have is none other than Helen Hayes.

"Miss Hayes would make the part a classic. She would give Alice depth and humor and naivete and quaintness. She would look the part, and act the part, and be Alice from the bottom of the longest set of legs she grew to the top of her head waving among the branches and drawing from the frightened pigeon the classic retort, 'Little girl, indeed! I've seen many a little girl in my day, but never one with such a neck as that!'

"It is my opinion that Alice needs more than the mere girlishness that Marian Nixon or Janet Gaynor would give her, and much, much more than the comedy talents of Marion Davies. As for Helen Chandler, I haven't seen enough of her to pass an opinion.

"But I have seen Helen Hayes be so warm and whimsical and gay and grave—have always seen so much of Alice in her—that I hope the powers that be will seriously consider her as a candidate for the role. I could die happy after hearing that catchy Hayes voice saying, 'I do wish the creatures wouldn't argue so.'

"I might even say to the aforesaid powers that be, 'If you don't, I'll set Dinah on you!'"

Sincerely (Signed),

FREDERIC J. HASKINS, Jr.

22 E. Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

This especially expresses the view of Ida P. Butler, 1812 K street, and the first thought of Isabelle M. Parks, whose final choice was Ruby Keeler, although her first was the Helen Hayes, of the old Columbia Theater Players of many years ago.

To other portions of Miss Butler's note this department wishes to make grateful and appreciative genuflections for the kind words which they contained.

By a last-minute change in bookings, the attraction at KKO-Keith's to follow Willard Mack's "What Price Innocence," opening today, with Jean Parker in the featured role, becomes Constance Bennett in "Bed of Roses," insead of Richard Dix, in "No Marriage Ties." This would be for the week beginning Friday, July 7, and you will have to engineer your own ribaldries, if any, involving the titles!

Tonight at 8 Mr. "Slim" Jones, recently celebrated in the Paramount Sound News, this column and elsewhere will emerge from his Bladensburg sarcophagus after 62 days of being buried alive. This period of self-imposed entombment, which began on April 29, shatters all previous records for voluntary interment.

During the period from April 29 to the present, Mr. R. L. "Slim" Jones has survived his living death in a "coffin" equipped with telephone, electric lights and other modern conveniences slightly in advance of the customary provisions for one's mortuary repose!

At that, I imagine the upper air will not seem so bad. How it actually does seem to Mr. Jones will be recorded again by the newsreels.

The early furtherance of the proposed partnership between Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell, through the medium of the Warner Brothers' new musical, "Hollywood Parade," recently made the subject of a few sultry observations in this corner, is temporarily placed in jeopardy by the continued illness of Mr. Powell, inopportunely laid low by an attack of pneumonia.

It had been the intention to test the popularity of Miss Keeler and Mr. Powell, teamed, in three pictures—"42d Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933" and the new venture now going into production. Of the first two there remains no doubt. The ingenuous young tap dancer and the ebullient young vocalist clicked emphatically in both. What they would have done in "Hollywood Parade" must remain largely problematical, since Stanley Smith has been rushed by plane to the West Coast to assume the role opposite Miss Keeler in the new production that was to have been taken by Mr. Powell.

Show business!

The boys may have been evenly matched last evening in the view of Garden officials, but there is no escape from the fact that Mr. Sharkey gave away just about Jackie Cooper in weight.

Blow business!

Nats Are Again Tied for Lead as Tigers Take Game, 5-4

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

Detroit, Mich., June 29.

MR. ROY VANGRAFLAN, of the American League umpiratical staff, who pirated today's ball game from the Nats with his foul decision on Gerald Walker's foul ball, is now public enemy No. 2 of the Washington Club.

Public enemy No. 1 in Umpire Brick Owens, perpetrator of the decision on Gehrig's foul home run at Griffith Stadium in May and it was on that occasion that Vangrafian groomed himself for his present low regard by Washington officials when he stood by idly and permitted Owens to fashion a home run for Gehrig where there was no home run at all.

But, today, Vangrafian qualified in his own right for the Astigmatic Society Cum Laude with his verdict that Walker's clout that landed

"Didn't Hurt Me," Carnera Declares

Madison Square Garden Bowl, New York, June 29 (A.P.).—A secret right uppercut, practiced in utmost privacy—the punch everybody said he didn't have—was the blow that tonight brought the heavyweight championship of the world to Primo Carnera.

"Every day I practice it for months," the man mountain crowed in his gutteral broken English as he sat in his dressing room after his sensational victory over Jack Sharkey.

"Nobody thought Primo had uppercut. I show 'em, hah?

"I felt better every round," he illustrated with a flourish of his huge fists. "I just feeling good when he went down. He never hurt me once," and the great fellow pounded his chest and grinned with an expanse that looked like the Grand Canyon.

"I fight anybody now—Baer, Schmeling—anybody. I whip anybody they say. Primo's champion of the whole world."

Left Home When 14 With Feet Wrapped in Burlap Bags.

"Not Intrusted" in Earnings; Strong Boy in Circus.

By H. Allen Smith.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN BOWL, New York, June 29 (U.P.).—The penniless beginnings of the giant-man Primo Carnera, who tonight became heavyweight champion of the world, can not be woven into the familiar design of an Alger story. If any weaving is to be done, the result must inevitably be a crazy quilt.

His victory tonight is made doubly impressive by the hodge-podge of strange doings that mark his past. He won in spite of obstacles that would have ruined men far better versed in the ways of the world than himself.

Until tonight this huge Italian has been popularly regarded as a clown, or a freak, such as the lady who weighs 350 pounds, the two-headed calf and the man with the revolving head. He has been branded a crook in public because of the bad odor which followed his barnstorming tour of America, when second-rate man after third-rate man fell beneath the hammer of his fist. The story has been told too often to be repeated here.

Managers Puzzle Italian.

But it must be taken into account that Primo doesn't quite grasp the manner in which fight managers operate in this country. He cleaned up something over $300,000 on his tour and today is bankrupt. He seems to be a fighting man, with no interest in the potential fortune that lies in success. They say of him that all he cares about is eating. His sole

AMERICAN LEADING ITALIAN OPPONENT BY FOUR ROUNDS TO ONE UNTIL SIXTH, WHEN PUNCH TAKES AWAY HIS CROWN

Rival Heavies Weighing In Just Before the Battle

Gob Is Hurled Twice Across Ring; 40,000 Watch Battle.

By Westbrook Pegler.

GARDEN BOWL, Long Island City, N. Y., June 29.—Always unusual from the day when he explained away his poor showing in his first fight in New York with the remark that he was just a rotten fighter who couldn't be expected to do any better, Jack Sharkey succumbed to a 6-inch right-hand uppercut to the jaw in the sixth round of his fight with Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship of the world in the Garden Corporation's Long Island bowl tonight.

Sharkey fell on his face just inside and parallel to the green plush ropes in near his own corner. He was counted out by Arthur Donovan, the referee, and hauled to his corner by his seconds who then required about a minute to cure him of what ailed him. Having lost the heavyweight championship which he acquired in the same arena a year ago after a fifteen-round bout with Max Schmeling, Sharkey soon emerged from his corner, shook hands with the astonished and jubilant Italian giant and returned to his angle of the scaffold to bow his head in meditation.

His eyes were squinting and he may have been having another of his tearful moments. As he stood lingering there with his thoughts, his manager, Johnny Buckley, hopped into the ring demanding that Carnera allow him to search his gloves for any foreign

"I'll Fight Again," Jack Sharkey Says

Madison Square Garden Bowl, New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Slowly and painfully, Jack Sharkey made his way tonight from the site that was both the scene of his coronation and downfall, and, after shaking off the effects of Primo Carnera's paralyzing right uppercut, he declared he would fight again.

"Will I hang up my gloves?" he asked as soon as his fuddled head cleared. "No," he said, "I won't hang them up. I'm going to fight again, maybe in a couple of weeks, when I am not so rusty. That's what is wrong with me now."

His statement that he intended to remain active in the ring, however, was far from being a ringing declaration of purpose. It may be that Sharkey was still dazed when he denied that his boxing career had ended.

ARLINGTON PARK, Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Late Date, from the Audley Farm, owned by B. B. Jones, of Virginia, scored an easy victory in the Wheaton Purse, the feature at Arlington today by eight lengths, eased up, over a sloppy track. Morsel, early pace marker in the mile race, was second. Polydorus trailed the field. Only three horses started. Heavy rains that fell here intermittently caused the card to be riddled with scratches.

Jockey R. Jones rode the winner, which took command at the head of the stretch when Morsel began to shorten his strides.

Late Date, a 4-year-old daughter of Hourless—Herd Girl, was the favorite, and ran the distance in 1:40 3-5. The winner paid $5.04 in the $2 mutuels.

Gold and Black Score At Aqueduct.

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 29 (A.P.).—Gold and Black, big 2-year-old filly representing the Glen Riddle Farms, again showed a keen liking for the local racing strip here today, the daughter of Big Blaze making it two in a row in the Wingfoot purse of five furlongs. Johnny Gilbert brought the 16-to-5 shot from a rear position to win going away by three parts of a length. Mrs. E. D. Morgan's Inflate was second, with three lengths' advantage over Mrs. E. F. Simms' Bibbies Choice. The time was 101 2-5.

The six starters got off in fine order, and after a few strides, Inflate took a narrow lead. She shook off Cherry Tart, but when Gold and Black came along on the outside to challenge, the pacemaker faltered under pressure. Bibbies Choice, a 50-to-1 chance, maintained third place throughout the running. Sonrisa, the favorite, broke in front, but found the pace too stiff, dropping back steadily after the first quarter mile.

Honey Locust Latonia Victor.

Latonia, Ky., June 29 (A.P.).—The colors of James C. Ellis, owner of the Dade Park Race Track, were carried to popular victory in today's chief attraction, when his consistent 6-year-old mare, Honey Locust, drove home the winner over six other of the better-grade platers.

Styled the Bank Lick Purse, the race was at a mile and 70 yards. Squall was first to show in front and led for a mile, where she succumbed to the favorite, Black Nose. Turning for home, Black Nose took a short lead, but retired as Honey Locust made her bid.

Squall, after dropping back to third place, came again in the last 70 yards, but Honey Locust fought the issue out gamely to win by a neck. High Diver, an outsider, closed fast to beat the tiring Black Nose for the show.

Honey Locust was a staunch second choice, paying $7.02 in the $2 mutuels. The daughter of Light Brigade covered the mile and 70 yards in the excellent time of 1:43 2-5.

AT THE POST

DEAR AL: ARLINGTON PARK, JUNE 29.

Well, friend, the boys out here are still talking about Singing Wood, that 2-year-old Mrs. John Hay Whitney sent out here. The son of Royal Minister turned in five and one-half furlongs in 1:04 3-5 to win by six lengths. Crowning Glory holds the track mark at 2-5 of a second under Singing Wood's time, but had the Whitney representative been pressed there's little doubt around here but that Bobby Jones would have gotten enough out of the colt to set a new mark. If you are interested financially, or otherwise, tomorrow, you might give these a chance. BILL.

FIRST RACE—TRAPLOU is well liked by the clockers and I'm stringing along with him. Worth taking the chance. MY BOSS has figures and trials which indicate he is ready. STIMULAW for the show end.

SECOND RACE—This sprint is packed with speed and the one that wins will know he's been in a hoss race. From the Bennings angle it looks like LADFIELD may give the talent a jolting. Not the fastest thing in the world, but fairly dependable when the plans are made. HIGHER and TRINCHERA to battle it out for the rest.

THIRD RACE—MIGHTY ATOM has the edge on those that have indicated they will compete in this mile test. HELEN BAB gets in with light weight and may be the dangerous one. DAMASCENE is a lot of foot but may need an off track.

FOURTH RACE—This is a cheap field and one that suits the purposes of DAVOC. WITCHES NIGHT and NONA can complete the money picuret as easily as any of the others.

FIFTH RACE—I'm sending SPRING STEEL right back and I'm expecting him to grab off another set of brackets. This one is formidable when in shape. SIDNEY GRANT appears to have the place money in his grip. ROCKY NEWS to show.

SIXTH RACE—ESSEFF did all the stable asked the other day in winning the feature and I see no reason why this one can't repeat. TECHNIQUE is fast and should be no worse than second. KNIGHT'S GAL may pick up the show money.

SEVENTH RACE—FOXIANA has had a lot of work of late but thrives on it. They may let this one go again tomorrow and pick up a purse. REVERBERATE and MOCKER will be ready to take up the battle if the top one falters.

EIGHTH RACE—FOXLAND HALL gets in the final with only 102 pounds. This horse is in tiptop shape and can not be overlooked here. MAD CAREER and BLUE LAW for the place and show.

YANKEES POUND OUT 9-3 VICTORY OVER CLEVELAND CLUB

Vosmik Drives Home All of Cleveland Club's Runs.

Gomez, Effective in Pinches, Scores His Ninth Victory.

CLEVELAND, June 29 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees regained a share in the American League lead today by whipping the flounderfing Cleveland Indians, 9 to 3, in the opener of a four-game series, while Washington dropped a decision to Detroit's Tigers. The teams went into a first-place tie, each with 43 victories and 25 defeats, for a .632 average.

The Yanks hopped on three Cleveland pitchers for thirteen timely hits, including a homer by Frank Crosetti in the eighth and three safeties by Babe Ruth.

Gomez Can Not Stop Vosmik.

Vernon Gomez stopped all the Indians except Joe Vosmik as he won his ninth game of the season. He was touched for twelve hits, but the only damaging blows were made by Vosmik, who drove in all the Cleveland runs with a single, double and triple.

Klein's Two Homers Help Phils Beat Bucs

Philadelphia, June 29 (A.P.).—Batting in all his team's runs with four hits—two of them home runs—in four trips to the plate, Chuck Klein, homer-hammering outfielder, made a personal triumph out of the Phillies' 6-to-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

Tied, until today's contest with Berger, of the Braves, for the National League home run lead, Klein connected with his fourteenth and fifteenth round-trip blows, as well as hitting a pair of singles, one of which scored a run.

Goliath Beats Morgan Midget

By H. I. Phillips.
(Copyright, by H. I. Phillips.)

LONG ISLAND STADIUM, June 29. For the first time in pugilistic history an elephant is heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

Primo Carnera, Jumbo's legitimate successor in the field of performing pachyderms, knocked out Jack Sharkey and brought the championship back to the animal kingdom here tonight.

It was a battle between Goliath and the Morgan midget.

A right-hand uppercut in the sixth round floored the Sailor stiffer than a frozen mackerel.

Long after the count of ten Jack lay face down on the floor, picking flowers in his Boston rock garden.

His impression a full minute later was that Carnera had thrown the rock garden at him and scored a bull's eye.

Carnera has a fist like a plumbing supply salesman's sample case and when it caught Sharkey on the chin it was one of the most complete knockouts in ring history.

It was a struggle between a human being and an animated firemen's monument, and you will never know how Sharkey felt in the sixth stanza until you have had Rodin's "Thinker" kick you with both feet.

Up to the sixth the man mountain loked big but ineffective, his theme song seemed to be "Above Thee I Swing," and the Sailor looked calm, cool and ready to collect.

It had the general appearance of an Elks' smoker battle between a boy from the fleet and a piano mover being given a screen test for the part of King Kong.

Carnera outgrunted Sharkey all through the fight, but seemed very much like a fat catcher caught between third base and home, until he suddenly intercepted a wire from Mussolini and swung into high gear.

But all the inaction of the first five rounds was made up for in the final chukker. Sharkey made the mistake of mixing too loosely with an infuriated bankrupt, and it was Carnera who holed all his putts.

Twice Sharkey fell, but was up immediately and the impression was that he had slipped. But a moment later when they were whanging away like a couple of night club disturbers "Preemo" brought the ham-like right out of the cellar and caught Jack on the chin.

Jack couldn't have been hurt more if he had been hit by a hydrant. He never moved as ten was counted. His startled seconds dragged him to his corner like an old rag, and it was two or three minutes before he asked "Why didn't that engineer blow his whistle?"

Preemo, his mouth fixed in a smile through which you could drive two cars abreast, was in the meantime doing the Neapolitan dance of the hysterical pachyderms, throwing kisses to everybody in the house and slapping his seconds all around the ring.

When Sharkey revived he shook Carnera's hands, and made a sporting gesture of resignation. He had fought a good fight, but he had made the great error of underestimating nature in the raw.

Up to the whirlwind climax, it was about as exciting as the economic conference. There was even talk of sending for Prof. Moley.

But the big round was one of those rounds fight fans don't forget. Carnera has improved more than general business in the last few months, and, viewed strictly as a recent bankrupt, it may be said that he displayed an amazing amount of hidden assets.

All Italy was reported ablaze at midnight with happy natives playing leap frog across the Vesuvius crater.

There will be no holding Mussolini now.

Bobby Jones, the w. k. golfer, had a ringside seat beside your correspondent. He expressed the expert opinion that Sharkey used the wrong clubs.

Bobby holds that no ordinary shooter can reach Carnera with anything under a No. 1 iron.

The Fight Round by Round

(Associated Press.)

ROUND TWO—Boxing carefully, Carnera led with his long left and smothered Sharkey as the champion drove to close quarters. Sharkey bounced his right off Primo's broad chest and grunted so he could be heard all over the ringside as he flung a long right that missed. Another terrific right to the jaw didn't miss and Carnera bounced back into the ropes as Sharkey followed him with a hard left hook to the head. Lunging in after feinting, like a fox darting in on its prey, Sharkey lunged again and his right cracked on Carnera's chin. Primo enveloped the champion in his huge arms as Sharkey tried to get a punch at his body. Sharkey was sneering at the tremendous Italian as he feinted, searching for an opening, with Carnera pinned against the ropes as the gong sounded.

ROUND THREE—Sharkey was fighting a very careful, very heady fight, moving constantly around, feinting for openings. He got Carnera set, but his right bounced from the Italian's defending left arm as though it had hit a lamp post. Again Sharkey flung himself in and as Carnera's arms flailed about, missing him with a dozen punches, the champion drove a furious right to the head and a hard left hook to the body. Carnera was falling back more and more on the defensive as Sharkey looped over a left to the head, feinted to bring Carnera's arms up, and smashed his left into the huge Italian's side. Sharkey wove in with a hard right to the body, but Carnera roughed him with both hands about the head as he pushed him along the ropes. The bell caught Sharkey tearing back for more.

ROUND FOUR—Carnera stuck out his long left hand, but Sharkey slipped under it, pulled away from three more stabs and shot inside for a quick volley into the Italian's body. The champion was away again before Carnera could swing his huge hands into action. Standing back now with his left poised, waiting constantly for Sharkey to come to him and missing often, Carnera took two hard lefts to the head and a right to the body before he managed to rough Sharkey enough in close to draw a warning from Referee Donovan. They paced around the ring, matching left jabs and Carnera suddenly swung a hard right to the head. Carnera grabbed Sharkey's left hand, pulled him in, and belted his head with both hands, drawing a warning for holding and hitting then another for backhanding. He threw Sharkey into the ropes again as though he were tossing a volley ball as the bell rang.

ROUND FIVE—Sharkey poked at Carnera's body with a left until he drew the giant's fists down, but Primo put his hands up in time to block a hard shot to the chin. As Sharkey banged a left to the body Carnera grabbed him, held him and banged him with his free hand, drawing another warning from the referee, but Sharkey merely sneered and smashed his left to the Italian's ribs again. Carnera hooked two lefts to Sharkey's jaw, but the champion followed him around the ring, feinted his hands down and smashed a terrific right to the giant's temple. Carnera wobbled like a brick chimney that is starting to come down, but he held and recovered quickly as Sharkey failed to fight clear of his tremendous arms. But Sharkey was right back on him, swinging left hooks to the head, his right cocked for a finisher. He chased Carnera to a corner, but the bell rang before he could do more than fire a long left to the jaw.

ROUND SIX—Bending low, keeping his head down around Carnera's waist, Sharkey stabbed up into the Italian's face, then hooked two lefts to the body. Carnera drove in with both hands, catching Sharkey off balance, and as he thumped the champion around the ring Sharkey slipped to the floor. He was caught off balance and came up without a count to weave in on the Italian. Carnera held the champion off with his left and ripped four ponderous rights to Sharkey's body. A right uppercut floored Sharkey and he was counted out.

Browns Beaten, 4-1; Johnson Also Hits Circuit Clout.

ST. LOUIS, June 29 (A.P.).—Jimmy Foxx, leading American League home-run batter, hit his nineteenth homer of the season today and the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 1, in the first game of the series.

Foxx's circuit clout came in the sixth inning with Coleman on base. The two other Athletic runs were brought in by Johnson's homer in the third with Cramer on. The Browns got their sole run in the third on two singles and a walk.

a decision in the pinch in the fifth inning that gave the Tigers two runs on a foul ball by Gerald Walker. The umpire took a great mental swing at the facts in the case and by some queer stretch of his imagination called the ball fair.

It was a line drive, fully three feet foul and to the left of the long white marker on the left-field screen. You could have knocked the press box occupants over with a feather when Vangrafian called it fair. The Tigers' coach at third base actually waved a runner back when the ball struck the screen foul.

But the astigmatic Vangrafian treated Walker to a two-base hit on the blow, one run scored and another was on third, to score a moment later on an infield out. It decided the ball game.

Actually the game was won by the Tigers in the ninth, after a double by Pinch-hitter Bob Boken had helped the Nats to tie the score in their half of the inning.

Bob Burke, the third of the Nats' pitchers, put himself in a fine mess by walking Rogell in the ninth and Hayworth poped a sacrifice bunt toward Kuhel that the first baseman barely failed to reach, putting two runners on and none out, except Burke, who abdicated in favor of Battling Bill McAfee.

In a trice there were three on and none out. Pinch-hitter Heinie Schuble laid down a bunt that McAfee overran and all hands were safe. The Nats' infield played in for Walker. They were able to look up just in time to see Walker bounce a single over Cronin's head, a scratchy affair, and the ball game was over.

This same Walker had his ups and downs all day. His lackadaisical play in the outfield was responsible for the Nats' first three runs, he was the maker of the foul two-base hit, he was the maker of the hit that won the game, and in the seventh inning after plumbing the depths of fielding skill, he scaled the heights with a sensational running catch of Sewell's liner to rob the latter of a triple and the Nats of two runs.

Walker's first offense occurred in the first inning when he fielded Schulte's looping double against the score board as if it were going to bite him and stood idly while two runs scored on the blow. The Nats had a 3-0 lead in the fourth when Walker started after Joe Kuhel's fly with all the speed of a rheumatic snail and permitted it to bound past him for a home run.

Whitehill had held the Tigers to one hit for four innings, but Greenberg led off the fifth with a double and a run scored on singles by Hayworth and Schoolboy Rowe, who had been the victim of the combined assaults of the Nats and his teammate Walker.

Hayworth was on second and Rowe was on first when Walker smashed the ball on a line to left field. It was a solid clout but as foul as the Mary Baker murder. It landed high up to the left of the line and Manush didn't even bother to field the ball. Hayworth scored from second and Rowe was on third when Manush picked the ball up. Third Base Coach Rhiel, in the meantime, was violently engaged in waving Rowe back after seeing the ball land foul. He could have scored easily, but paused to rest at third before retracing his steps.

And then when it dawned upon Manager Cronin that Vangrafian had called the ball fair, he stormed into the plate, ranted for fully five minutes at the umpire, dashed back to third in an effort to bring Umpire Summers into the argument. Summers folded his hands, would have none of it, and eventually Cronin resigned himself to his umpiratical fate.

The heat of argument, combined with the heat of the day, did not improve Earl Whitehill's temper, and Cronin sent him to the showers, calling in Jack Russell. Rowe tied the score at 4-4 when he crossed the plate on Owens' infield out.

The Tigers went to the front, 4-3, in the sixth when singles by Stone and White and Greenberg's infield out accounted for a run. The Nats failed to tie the score in the eighth following Bluege's double when Ormsby rendered a bum decision after Sewell beat out a hit to third base.

matter, such as lead slugs, concrete knuckles or hunks of pipe which might have been worked into the upholstery by some mischance in the factory.

Gloves Are Searched, Bare Nothing.

Bill Duffy, Carnera's chief second, indignantly spurned this suggestion and refused to dignify by compliance, but Bill Brown, the new prize fight commissioner, recently named in the place of the late William Muldoon, hopped up onto the platform and searched the weapons officially. Finding no illegal stuffing, he exonerated Carnera and all the others concerned to this extent, at least, and the confusion soon ended with the departure of both parties of sportsmen.

The knockout came after 2 minutes and 27 seconds of the sixth round when Sharkey was leading in the scors by four rounds to one. Primo had won the first round with his tremendous superiority in strength which enabled him twice to hurl Sharkey across the ring. The first time, Sharkey sailed backward about five yards so fast that his feet just brushed the canvas on the way and but for the ropes might have been tossed clear out of the bowl. From the second round to the sixth Sharkey was in general command of the action and a couple of times made Carnera seem very presumptuous to have entered the ring with his betters.

The prize fight played to an evening's business estimated at about $200,000 net, contributed by about 40,000 patrons.

The punch that finished Sharkey did not seem sufficient to cause the damage which it purported to cause, but Donovan, one of the best referees in the world and a boxer of some experience himself, insisted afterward that Sharkey was sincerely knocked out.

Just Lay There and Was Counted Out.

That was one man's opinion, but the others present were at liberty, of course, to conclude that Sharkey, who never came off the floor to fight in any of his important bouts, was some distance from the end of his endurance. He lay there and was counted out when Jack Dempsey put him down, although other distinguished heavyweights who were present thought they would have come up at least once, and this evening he struggled slightly, but not too hard, to hoist himself and resume his struggle with Primo. Primo was more comic than ferocious, but this is not to deny that early in the sixth round he troubled Sharkey with a left hook to the body, followed by a left jab which spun him slightly, but not out of control to the ropes.

As Sharkey came against the velvet lines Primo clipped him with a clumsy swipe on the skull and Sharkey, trying to come off the ropes, became entangled in them for an instant, instead. He ducked to his left and was making for the open ring when Primo rushed at him with a short left to his face, followed by a short right as Sharkey crouched. Sharkey tried to regain his balance, but was still shaken from the tussling, and the best he could do for himself was a short and not very important right to the face. Sharkey slipped to the floor during the melee, but hopped up before Donovan could score a count on him and rushed at Primo with his head down. He missed a right swing to the head, but swung again and landed square on Primo's chin in a neutral corner as Carnera extended his neck, trying to stretch away from it. Sharkey threw another of these swings, missed and floundered into a clinch at Primo's waist as the big, big man stood there trying to remember what the book said about situations the like of this.

Primo wrestled him loose and tagged him with a short right as Sharkey stooped near the ropes. The finish was as simple as that.

Sharkey fought briskly and apparently with purpose and confidence until the instant when it was put up to him to come off the floor. He endured rough handling in the first, seeming to have forgotten how strong Carnera was, but Primo knew nothing about punching and the wrestling spins did Sharkey no damage.

In the sixth, as soon as Sharkey was hooked with the first left to the body he seemed to lose his poise and by the time he came off the ropes he had forgotten all the self-possession with which he had been fighting up to now.

"There he goes, crazy again," observed a young spectator, as Sharkey came up from his knees, having been crushed, not punched down, for a moment. "There he goes," and Sharkey tore in wildly. A few seconds later he had strewn himself along the canvas.

Sharkey had announced beforehand that if he lost the title he would quit the ring, but, always womanish, he changed his mind in his dressing room and found he would impose on the customers to the extent of one or more comeback fights.

Carnera Wins World Title By Halting Sharkey in 6th

the canvas, hand to his head, as the final ten was tolled, 2 minutes 27 seconds after the start of the sixth. Then his seconds leaped in and dragged the beaten champion to his corner, still apparently in a daze.

If Sharkey lives up to his prebattle statements, the picture of him slumped in his chair, water from the bottle of his frantic seconds cascading over his hair, his closed eyes, his body, will be the last the faithful will get out of the man who has flared so spectacularly through the heavyweights for the last eight years. Right up to the last punch tonight he was fighting one of the greatest battles of his career.

Bobbing, feinting, his lips in a thin snarl, eyes flashing between narrowed lids, the Boston sailor ripped into battle in flashes. He moved the giant Italian around, found his openings, then lashed his punches—long rights to the head—left hooks to the body, straight to the mark.

Three times in the second round Sharkey's right cracked on Carnera's chin, hurting him obviously. The third was close, as Carnera, grabbing the champion in his great arms, heaved him about the ring.

So rough did the Italian become in the fourth that he was twice warned by Referee Donovan, once for holding and hitting, again for backhanding, but Sharkey's expression never changed. He stalked his man carefully, making him miss, giving him his only chances in the clinches, where Carnera's tremendous power held all the advantage.

A swarming attack in the fifth broke through Carnera's arms and for a moment it seemed as if the Italian's course was run. He reeled as Sharkey chased him savagely, relentlessly, thudding left hooks to the body, winging every ounce of power he had behind his right to the head. Near the end of the round the right landed full and clean again. Carnera's legs spread wide, his eyes stared a second, and his hands started down. But before Sharkey could set him for another clean smash, the huge natural guard of Carnera's arms was up again, he held tight, and the bell rang.

Sharkey had all the better of the sixth and had Carnera in even graver danger when the final blow crushed him down. The Associated Press score card gave Sharkey four of the first five rounds, crediting Carnera only with the first.

Sharkey, at 201 pounds, conceded Carnera almost 60 pounds in weight, and the strain was obvious. A far better boxer than the last time they met, improved in his hitting, Carnera still was no match for Sharkey in ring generalship and clean punching. But one hefty belt, with all his weight behind it, offset all that in the final exchange.

Carnera's victory gave him several firsts in the book of heavyweight records. He is the biggest man ever to win the greatest of boxing's crowns, and was the first challenger ever to enter a ring with a heavyweight champion favored in the betting. At ring time Carnera was a 6 to 5 favorite.

Originally a circus strong man discovered in a carnival in France, scarcely taken seriously as a fighter after his first barnstorming tour of the United States in which he piled up a string of questionable knockouts, Carnera became the second foreigner to win the title. Max Schmeling, the German, who beat Sharkey on a foul three years ago, then lost the championship to him on a 15-round decision last summer, was the first.

It was Sharkey's third knockout defeat, the first since Jack Dempsey, who sat at the ringside tonight, blasted him down in seven rounds in 1927.

NEE DEFEATED IN SCHOLASTIC GOLF FINALS BY 2 AND 1

District Boy Downed by Munger

Georgetown Prep Ace Out-Drives Rival at Greenwich.

Unplayable Lies Are Factors in Defeat by Kiski Youth.

GREENWICH COUNTRY CLUB, Greenwich, Conn., June 29.—Maury Nee, Georgetown Prep star, was defeated this afternoon by Jack Munger, of Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., 2 and 1, in the finals of the Eastern interscholastic golf championship.

Nee's defeat was attributed to three unfortunate lies—one in the trap at the long fourth hole, one in the rough on the twelfth, where his ball was unplayable, and another on the thirteenth. It was on the thirteenth that Nee outdrove Hill by 20 yards, only to find his ball in a cuppy lie, fairly well buried, and he lost the hole to go 3 down.

The Georgetown Prep athlete reached the finals this morning by scoring a thrilling victory over Sidney Carson, of Kiski Prep, 1 up, after being 4 up at one stage of the match. Hill eliminated Prince Fumitaka Konoye, of Lawrenceville, 5 and 4, in his semifinals match.

Rivals All Even To Tenth.

Nee and Munger, a fellow townsman of Gus Moreland, came to the tenth all even. A bold approach cost Nee the eleventh, and his bad lies ruined him on the twelfth and thirteenth. Nee refused to be beaten. He braced perceptibly and won the fourteenth while Munger floundered in a trap. Munger went 3 up again by taking the fifteenth and then came Nee's best hole of the day—a brilliant second shot to the sixteenth that dropped less than a yard from the pin for a birdie 3.

For a moment this appeared to be the necessary stimulant, as Munger hooked to the left, then to a trap. Nee was soft with his approach, as Munger came out 6 feet from the cup, gaining a half and ending the match.

The second flight was an all-Georgetown Prep finals, and was won by Frank Allan, who defeated Jimmy Ferguson, 2 and 1.

comment before the fight was: "I hope he don't rain."

A few days ago, when he was being questioned in connection with his bankruptcy petition, he revealed his feelings in the matter. To each question put to him concerning his earnings, his reply was: "I dono. I not intrusted. I not intrusted."

The man mountain was born in Sequals, near Venice, and is said to have weighed 22 pounds at birth. In his early youth he worked at carpentry and tile laying for his father. And at 14—already the size of a full-grown man—he left home to make his living, wearing burlap bags wrapped about his feet.

Became "Strong Boy" Of Circus.

He became a cement-mixer in Paris and then joined a honkey-tonk circus as "strong boy." He bent bars across his chest, pitted his strength against horses and automobiles. Then Leon See, a boxing promoter, chanced to hear of his prodigious size and took him in tow. Primo won his first fight against a 200-pound second rater by knocking him out in the first round. That was in 1929.

After a brief fighting career in Europe, the future world champion's shrewd manager, See, bethought himself of the money that might be made by bringing Primo to this country. They arrived on December 31, 1929, and a small crowd which gathered at the pier ignored Gene Tunney, who had gone to meet Walpole, to cheer for the Italian giant.

There ensued a campaign of publicity which became almost as ridiculous as that which followed upon the arrival in this country of Zaro Agha, who claimed the age of 156 and babbled himself into national prominence.

Pilots Capitalize on His Size.

Primo's managers began capitalizing on his size without delay. They even had him getting a shave at John the Barber's tonsorial cathedral at specified hours. Nobody knows whether the barber shop paid for the crowds Carnera attracted.

His managers as well as most of the sporting fraternity judged him for a palooka from the start, and Carnera was not recognized as a capable fighter until he stood up under Sharkey's lashing at Ebbets Field in October, 1931. After that he commanded a bit more respect.

Then came the unfortunate contest with Ernie Schaaf, who died after being knocked out by the mammoth Italian.

Physicians have said Carnera was afflicted with gandular trouble and would die after his first good fight. They said he had varicose veins, and never could last. Psychologists have speculated on the effect his abnormalities have had on his mind.

He showed 'em.

Ga. Tech Star Enters Golf Semifinals

Yates Is One of Three Choices in College Title Running.

By Francis B. Cass.

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y., June 29 (A.P.).—Three of the top-heavy pretournament favorites and one invader from the West today smashed their way into the semifinal rounds of the National Intercollegiate Golf championship by registering decisive victories in the 36-hole quarter-final round.

Playing under a blistering sun, which baked the fairways and kept the mercury hanging around the 100 mark throughout the day, the four, Charlie Yates, of Georgia Tech; Walter Emery, of Oklahoma; Henry Kowal, of Colgate, and Rodney Bliss, of Cornell, disposed of their opponents with comparative ease.

Emery, who came out of the West practically unknown, walked away with the individual honors of the day as he sank Bob Cochran, of St. Louis, under a barrage of birdies and won, 8 and 7.

Cochran Blows Up After First Nine.

Cochran caused trouble only on the first nine holes of the day's play and then blew up completely. Emery shot a steady, consistent game and won easily on the twenty-ninth green.

Kowal and Chester Birch, of Dartmouth, provided the closest round of the day, a ding-dong battle, which lasted to the thirty-fifth, when the Colgate captain, with a two-hole lead, got a half and a 2 and 1 victory.

Yates, the South's standard bearer in this tournament, came through the day with flying colors but not before Vincent Fehlig, of Notre Dame, another dark horse, had caused him several anxious minutes. The Atlantan finished the first 18 with a three-hole margin, but lost the first three holes of the afternoon play.

Both he and his opponent carded 7s on the twenty-second, but Yates then settled down to pile up a lead again and won, 8 and 7.

Bliss, from Omaha, Nebr., who defeated Johnny Goodman, present national open title holder, to win his State championship, was 1 under par on the first 9 as compared with 42 for his opponent, Wilson Marks, of Princeton, and he had the only eagle of the match play to date on that mound.

To get it, he laid a terrific second wood 12 feet from the pin on the 480-yard fourth and canned the putt for a 3. He finished the first 18 4 up and walked away with the afternoon 18, winning 7 up.

Bliss will meet Kowal in a 36-hole match tomorrow, while Yates will oppose Emery. The two survivors tomorrow will compete for the title on Saturday.

THIS MORNING:

Radio Broadcaster Calls Foul.

The radio broadcaster, giving a play-by-play description from the press box, already had called the ball foul and told his public that there was no doubt about it. He did not retract his statement even after explaining that Vangrafian had called it a legitimate hit.

The play-by-play account of the fifth inning in the late edition of today's Detroit Times described the play as follows: "Walker doubled off the left field screen, scoring Hayworth, Rowe stopping at third. One of the umpires called the ball foul. Vangrafian, behind the plate, ruled it fair. It actually was foul by several inches and plainly visible from the press box."

H. G. Salsinger, sports editor of the Detroit News, made the following observation in his story of the game: "Walker hit a high drive to left. The ball struck outside the white foul line, but Umpire Vangrafian called it a fair ball."

To Complain to Harridge Of Vangrafian.

The Washington club can make no protest of the Vangrafian decision on the ball, inasmuch as there can be no questioning of an umpire's judgment on a batted ball under the rules, but Manager Cronin tonight declared that Vangrafian would not escape official censure.

Despite the fact that the door is shut in the face of the Washington club with respect to a protest on the game, President Griffith is expected, nevertheless, to bring the attention of League President Harridge his complaints on the umpiring this season, notably by Owens and Vangrafian, with a view to getting a new deal in umpiring for 1934.

HITS AND ERRORS.

Whitehill was booed and cheered both when he went to the box for the Nats, but the boos had it . . . they say Gerald Walker only fields well when he's hitting well . . . after Vangrafian gave him a two-base hit on his foul ball, he went into right center to rob Luke Sewell of a triple, so there must be something to it . . . Luke Sewell came within inches of being tossed out of the ball game in the fifth, when he tosed his mask 50 feet in the air while Cronin was trying to make Vangrafian see the truth on Walker's foul . . . Walker takes a bigger lead off first base than any other player in the league . . . Bill McAfee is new famous, apparently. . . . The $250 fine he drew for punching a colored Cleveland fan rated him the attention of the photographers before the game . . . it's Crowder for the Nats in the second game of the series tomorrow . . . with Bridges due for the Tigers . . . Cronin sent Dave Harris in to pinch-hit against the right-handed Rowe, with two men on, in the eighth . . . draw your own conclusions . . . Right!

Mrs. Moody, Vines Win Singles

Move Another Step Toward Titles in British Play.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 29 (A.P.).—The two American favorites and defending singles titleholders, Helen Wills Moody and H. Ellsworth Vines, Jr., moved steadily and effectvely toward their major objectives today in the British tennis championships, but another stalwart of the invading contingent, Keith Gledhill, passed out of the men's tournament picture.

Following his defeat the day before with Vines in the doubles, before the brisk attack of a youthful Australian team, Gledhill met his master in England's brilliant Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, who scored for the home force by 6—3, 10—8, 6—1.

It was all over when Austin wrested the second set from the eighth ranking American after trailing Gledhill 5—6 on games at one stage and three times being beaten back at set point. Gledhill's game went downhill rapidly after that and he quickly lost the final set.

Dr. Prenn Is Next Foe In Singles.

Vines did not appear bothered by his sprained ankle as he swept through three sets, applying the pressure easily whenever he needed it, to eliminate R. Niki, of Japan, 6—2, 6—4, 6—4. The American ace has not yet opened up the full blast of his strokes and appears to be "rating" his pace. He probably will have to apply the pressure against his next singles opponent, Dr. Daniel Prenn, of Germany, who scored a straight set victory today over Don Turnbull, of Australia, 7—5, 6—0, 6—2.

Meanwhile, Cliff Sutter, third ranking American, and the tall Californian, Lester Stoefen, impressed the galleries with third-round conquests over first-rate opposition. Sutter's stylish game was especially effective, as he outplayed and outfought the top-ranking German, Gottfried von Cramm, 6—3, 6—4, 9—7, in a beautiful stroking duel. Stoefen came through against W. H. Powell, 6—2, 6—4, 6—2, baffling the Englishman with his blinding service and having command of the match at nearly every stage.

BROOKS CLUB BOOKED.

Brooks Club tossers will invade Ballston Sunday for a game with the local Volunteer Firemen, starting at 3 o'clock.

Steele Defeats Garibaldi On Ruse

Pulls 'Possum Act; Coleman, Marshall, O'Shocker Win.

By Frank H. Young.

PETE SAUER (Ray Steele to you) pulled the 'possum act in defeating Gino Garibaldi in the feature scrambled ears battle on the Griffith Stadium mat last night, and it happened so suddenly that the 4,500 faithful, sitting on the edges of their chairs at the time, hardly know what happened. Following some flying mares, Garibaldi thought Steele, lying on the mat at the time, was just about out. He intended to pounce on him, but he never got that far. Steele suddenly lashed out with his feet, connected with Gino's head and the latter went down with birdies singing in his ears. Mussolini should be told of this awful trick.

It was a great exhibition as long as it lasted, both showing speed, aggressiveness, roughness and toughness, and the two battled about even when the end suddenly came. Every hold in the book had been obtained and broken by both, and it remained for Steele to win on the old trick—the 'possum act.

From start to finish, it was a good show, just the type that the murder-loving mat public craves. As good as the headliner proved to be, many liked the Able Coleman-Frank Speers set-to just as well. The way Referee Burns nagged "Gentleman Frank" was nobody's business. Burns wouldn't let Speers slug, knee, bite, scratch, pull hair, butt or gouge and Speers was battling Burns as well as Coleman throughout.

One of First Decisions Given Acre.

And like the New York Boxing Commission, which never rules the same way twice, although both men were going strong when the time limit expired, Burns gave Coleman the decision—one of the first decisions ever rendered here. It was based on Rule 18, whatever that is.

Floyd Marshall and Son Jennings, the Indian, opened the show and their battle reminded of a prize-fight. After 20½ minutes of mauling, Marshall flopped Jennings with a series of crotch holds and body slams. And the fans, having nothing else handy to fling, gave him a peanut shower at the finish.

Pat O'Shocker and Fred Grobmier furnished the tamest bout of the evening. They tied each other in more knots than a sailor knows during the 23 minutes they tangled. Grobmier seemed willing to take punishment to get his "figure-four" scissors, but when he did get it, it proved to be his undoing. He and O'Shocker fell out of the ring while it was being applied, and this was the beginning of the end for Grobmier. O'Shocker flipped him out of the ring twice and then clamped him down with some crotch holds and body slams.

The less said about the Dick Shikat-Henry Piera bout the better. The two were grossly mismatched and Shikat probably could have won in five minutes had he willed. Piera undoubtedly is a nice lad, is good to his folks and all that, but he is not a good wrestler. A flying mare and body slam ended him after eighteen minutes of mild action.

DETTWEILER GIRL LEADS IN GOLF

THE Greeks had a phrase for it, and so did Helen Dettweiler, Virginia Pope and Virginia Williams.

The weather man, too, had words for it, but he gave the girls no consolation—his thermometer readings for the day looked like the girls' scores. The weather was just too hot.

The three young golfers started out early yesterday morning to tackle Old Man Par at Columbia Country Club's golf course. The occasion was the District women's junior championship. They were the only entries—three on a match.

Hoping for more pleasant weather, the girls will resume the junior battle with eighteen more holes this morning. Their cards:

Wales Golf Victor Over Lady Astor

Walton Heath, Surrey, England, June 29 (A.P.).—With a gallant but nonetheless decisive display of his golfing ability, the Prince of Wales today overcame a 7-stroke handicap to defeat Lady Nancy Astor, 2 and 1, in a unique match featuring the annual parliament tournament.

The caddies said the prince, who has a club handicap of 11, was a "three-to-one favorite" before the match but the British heir, conceding strokes on 7 longer holes, did not gain the lead until after 13 holes had been played. The American-born peeress at one time was 2 up, played her shots nicely and held the prince even on most of the greens.

The result marked another Anglo victory in international golf over the past fortnight but Lady Astor disclaimed the sport as part of her American heritage, saying: "Golf is essentially an English interest of mine. I knew nothing about the game while I was in America. I don't think I was ever off a horse until I was 37."

After that Mrs. Thompson dominated every game.

The above predictions give the times the water is high and low. Slack water (time of turn of current) occurs somewhat later. In Chesapeake Bay, midchannel, between Chesapeake Beach and Annapolis, flood and ebb currents begin about 3 to 4 hours after low and high water, respectively, by the shore. At other places given in the table slack waters occur from ½ to 1½ hours after the times of low and high water.

Radio Dial Flashes

By Robert D. Heinl

THE business of the Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. has improved sharply since March and is well ahead of the corresponding period of 1932 and even ahead of 1931, according to A. Y. Tuel, vice president.

Sales in dollars and cents of the Arcturus Radio Tube Co., Newark, N. J., T. P. Feeney, export manager, declares, for the month of May were 25 per cent ahead of the corresponding month last year.

Further optimistic news is from LeRoi J. Williams, vice president of Grigsby-Grunow Co., Chicago, manufacturers of Majestic radios, and is to the effect that their factory is working overtime in order to meet present demands.

"Majestic radio shipments for this month are already double those of all those last June," Mr. Williams said. "Our radio production schedule is more than five times the radio shipments for last June. Our radio production schedule for this month has not been equaled in June since 1929."

Orders on hand for new marine radio equipment give definite indication of an upswing of business in American shipping, according to Charles J. Pannill, executive vice president of the Radiomarine Corporation of America.

Mr. Pannill pointed out that a substantial number of vessels are being recommissioned at this time, while others are placing contracts for apparatus and radiotelegraph service.

"Within the last week," Mr. Pannill said, "we have received contracts covering equipment for five ships of the Baltimore Mail Line and two ships of the Continental Steamship Co., as well as vessels of the Isle Royale Transportation Co., the Atlantic & Caribbean Steam Navigation Co., and the Texas Co. We also have an order from the War Department to equip twelve seagoing dredges with radio. Another order from the Pan-American Airways is for furnishing radio apparatus and direction finder to the S. S. Jelling, which has been chartered by the Airways Co. for survey work in connection with the proposed Transatlantic air route.

"The company recently received from the Lykes Bros. steamship interests the largest single radio order ever awarded by a private American concern, covering 67 vessels.

"It is particularly encouraging to learn that five tankers of the Standard Shipping Co., which are equipped with our radio apparatus, will shortly be coming out of lay-up. To our radio business, that is as good as a new order. To marine business, generally, I think it is further proof that the beginnings of better times are definitely with us."

THE DRY side of the fight now being waged over repeal of the eighteenth amendment will be presented to a Nation-wide radio audience at 2 p. m., when Mrs. Ella Boole, internationally known dry leader, speaks over an N. B. C. network. Her subject will be "Prohibition at the Crossroads." She will speak from the fifty-ninth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. at Milwaukee.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rex Tugwell will explain "Cotton Adjustment and Our Foreign Situation" (WMAL, 10:30 p. m.) Oscar Johnston will be the WJSV "Cotton Week" speaker at 10:15 p. m.

"Exploring the Atlantic's Greatest Depth" with Dr. Paul Bartsch, of the National Museum, should be able to take your mind off the heat (WJSV, 1:45 p. m.).

CEREMONIES dedicating the Massachusetts War Memorial, recently completed atop Mount Greylock, the highest mountain in the State, will be heard here over WRC at 1 p. m. The memorial will be accepted by Gov. Joseph B. Ely for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

It stands on the summit of Mount Greylock, at a height of 3,500 feet and about 16 miles from Pittsfield, Mass. Field engineers encountered considerable difficulty in setting up facilities for the broadcast, due to the inaccessibility of the spot, but finally ran wire lines and a receiving unit in far enough to insure perfect pickup from a mobile short-wave transmitter which will be sent to the mountain top.

Phil Harris, whose voice and manner of singing have been compared to those of the late Bert Williams, will offer "Nobody," a favorite ditty from Williams repertoire, on the second of his programs, broadcast over WMAL at 8 o'clock tonight.

CANADIAN music will be played in honor of Dominion Day today by the Marine, Army and Navy Bands. The Marine Band, which was one of the leading attractions at the Eastern Canadian Exposition at Ottawa last summer, will play "Maple Leaf Forever" and "Canada, Oh, Canada" (Shut-in Hour, WMAL, 10 a. m.).

The Army Band will play a number of selections by Canadian composers, concluding with "Friendship March," which was written and dedicated to the Canadians by Capt. William J. Stannard. (WJSV, 2:30 p. m.).

Likewise the Navy Band concert over WRC at 9:15 p. m. will also have something in recognition of the day.

The Sharkey-Carnera engagement will be fought over again tonight by Grantland Rice in the Country Club program (WJSV, 8:30 p. m.).

Between performances at a Hartford theater this week, Lanny Ross, not stopping to remove makeup, hurried over to the Hartford General Hospital to see a friend.

Waiting in the reception room he was pounced on by a staff physician who tried to hurry him into the clinic, in the uncertain light taking the makeup for an extreme case of jaundice. After explanations both had a good laugh.

"The horse may be passing out in this machine age, but not in the affections of radio artists. This summer, among the radio singers who arrange almost daily canters are Mary McCoy, Frank Luther, Ruth Lyon and Robert Simmons."—Press notice.

Also Ed Wynne sticks to his horse.

WHEN four daredevil midgets, driving midget cars with gasoline tank capacity of one quart, flash around the speedway at the Midget Village, Chicago Century of Progress, in the finals of the International miniature automobile race on Friday, June 30, the speed duel, at something under 20 miles an hour, will be described over WMAL at 3:30 p. m.

Barney Oldfield, famous automobile racer of the early days, will pace the race.

Nat Shilkret, musical director, will take his first real vacation in 18 years when he sails for Europe at midnight, July 4.

There is probably no director who can match Nat's achievement during his 18 vacationless years. In part that record includes an average of three sponsored broadcasts a week for eight consecutive years; synchronizing the music for 250 movie shorts, and recording some 30,000 selections on phonograph disks. In that time he also has composed more than 1,000 pieces of music.

A New Yorker at Large

By Mark Barron.

New York—Vignettes of the town:

Blonde girl playing a violin in front of Carnegie Hall. A hat with its mute appeal for alms is at the side. Inside the hall a famous virtuoso is preparing for a concert for which he will receive $1,000.

A panhandler with a new approach. "Mister, can you spare a nickel for a couple of aspirin?" he implores. "I've got a beastly headache." Such ingenuity deserves reward.

Storm-Tossed Brothers.

Two street peddlers take refuge in an abandoned doorway on Sixth avenue as a torrent of rain begins to fall. Their bags are placed together as an improvised table, out comes a pack of cards and a heated pinochle game begins. Others hurry into the protection of the doorway and in a few moments the game has as attentive a gallery as if it were a Lenz-Culbertson bridge match.

A lad with graying hair and wearing a tan felt hat hesitates in Forty-seventh street. "Fuego, if you so kindly plis," he requests, pointing to his unlighted cigar. That's no Spaniard. That's Lou Holtz, raconteur with a specialty of Delancey street legends.

Clemence Dane, erudite British playwright, returns from Hollywood and surprises interviewers by being one author who has no harsh words to say about the movie lots. In fact, she likes the place.

Mildred Luber is back from Europe with a husband she annexed in Holland. This youthful, dark-eyed Hungarian girl is the legal guardian of Reri, the Polynesian-French dancer, who has gone back to her native Bora Bora.

A small crowd gathers at a pier on the North River to bid bon voyage to William Albert Robinson. With his bride, a Chicago debutante, he is sailing to the Galapagos. Robinson, only a year ago, sailed his 32-foot ketch, the Svaap, around the world. Svaap means "Dream" in some foreign language. I forget which.

Parade Ground.

For some strange reason Fifth avenue has become a favorite parade ground for that group of tattered, unkempt mendicants who shuffle along muttering to themselves.

One is a seedy-looking fellow whose tangled locks droop below his shoulders. His shoes are nothing more than newspapers tied on with strings. He never walks, but always runs along in an easy trot. When he reaches Fifty-ninth street he suddenly darts into Central Park and disappears.

Recently there has been a new wave of suicides who leap from windows of Times Square hotels.

Claiborne Foster, once one of Broadway's starring ingenues, has returned from her Rio de Janeiro home. Says she won't return to the stage.

Take your best girl to see it!

Healthful Recreation Offered at Many Resort Places Few Hours Away.

Washingtonians expecting to leave the city for the week-end and perhaps continue their stay for the Fouth of July holiday will find in the resorts, hotels and beaches close by the city and easily accessible for a short vacation much to be desired for holiday enjoyment. Healthful recreation, mountain climbing, swimming or lolling on the sand, golf, fishing, riding or just resting—all within easy access of the Capital City.

In Frederick, the quaint town of Barbara Frietchie fame stands a replica of the home from which Dame Barbara is said to have waved the Union flag in the face of enemy troops as they marched by her home, the same flag being on display along with other relics rich in Civil War history. The flag-waving act of the 95-year-old woman was made immortal by the famous poem, "Barbara Frietchie," by John Greenleaf Whittier.

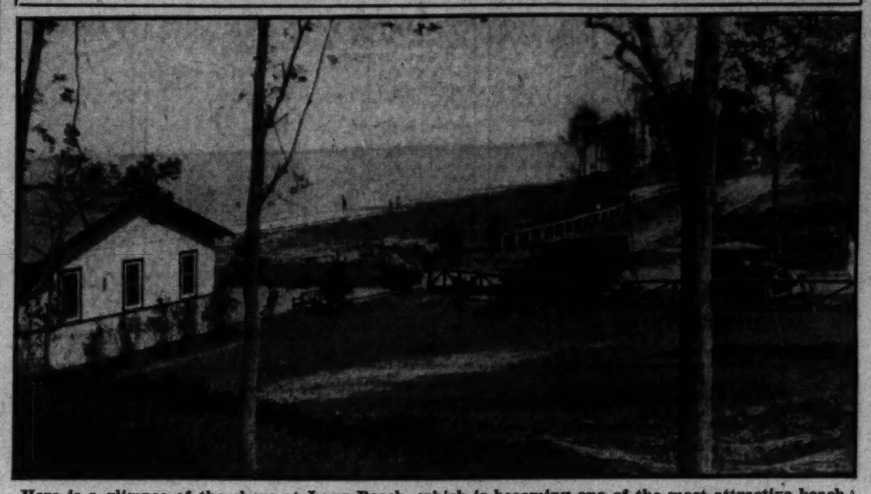
Also in Frederick is the Francis Scott Key Hotel, named after the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," who lies buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery in Frederick.

This hotel, modern and fireproof throughout, has been widely acclaimed by Washington patrons as a delightful destination for a week-end trip or a drive for Sunday dinner.

Atop the Catoctin Mountains, overlooking the picturesque Middletown Valley, is Braddock Heights. The summer colony of cool, delightful mountain breezes, where the vacationist may enjoy golf, hiking, swimming and the beautiful mountain scenery.

The wide, spacious porches of the Hill Top House in Harpers Ferry, W. Va., afford the vacationist a view said to be unexcelled anywhere in the United States. Guests find this hotel a restful and convenient location for an enjoyable week-end drive. Situated high on the West Virginia hills, one obtains an excellent view of the surrounding country and the quaint village and monument of John Brown, a famous figure in the War Between the States.

SHORE VIEW AT LONG BEACH



Here is a glimpse of the shore at Long Beach, which is becoming one of the most attractive beach spots near the Capital. It offers beautiful and economical home sites which allow the family restful vacations for little cost.

Increased Ferry Service Is Given Eastern Shore

The Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Co., providing the shortest and quickest route to and from the Eastern Shore of Maryland, is operating frequent service between Annapolis and Claiborne and Annapolis and Metapeake. Six daily trips are made for the holiday period.

For those going to Ocean City, Rehoboth Beach or other summer places in this direction there is a saving of 100 miles of driving.

B. Frank Sherman, general manager of the line, reports that travel to the Eastern Shore so far this year indicates an unusually successful season for beach resorts in the vicinity.

Shady Plum Point Beach Awaits Holiday Crowds

Wide, open stretches of bay with good sandy bottoms await Washingtonians at Plum Point, on Chesapeake Bay, over July 4.

Much of the beach is shaded, adding to its popularity with those who enjoy picnics and outings. The new road from North Beach to Plum Point is now completed. It is smooth and hard-surfaced.

Elevators Give Service In Shenandoah Caverns

Elevator service in a cavern. There's something that would have given the gnomes plenty to talk about during the long, dark evenings.

The innovation has become a reality at the Shenandoah Caverns of Virginia. In fact, the Shendoahs are said to be the only caverns in Virginia with elevator service. They are situated on the U. S. Highway, No. 11.

Large Week-End Crowd Expected at Long Beach

High Class Bay Shore Community Offers Economical and Beautiful Homesites Where Average Family Can Enjoy Outings for Small Cost.

The general outpouring of admiring families at Long Beach last week-end gave evidence of what the coming season holds in store for this popular bayshore community. Last week-end the bridge experts who have charge of classes in the leading apartment houses and hotels of Washington, together with many of their friends, had a bathing and summer bridge outing at Long Beach, the first of many such gatherings which will take place this summer.

Summer Home Economy.

According to Leon Ackerman, general manager of Long Beach, Inc., economy has become the watchword of nearly every family and everyone is trying to keep expenses down to the minimum.

The purchase of a homesite in a high class bayshore community is in line with such a program of economy for these reasons: It provides at small outlay of cash a place where the whole family can enjoy an outing not only through the summer months of this year, but for many years to come, instead of paying out the same amount or more to railroad companies, hotels, &c., for a short month's vacation; it benefits the health of every member of the family, especially the growing children, and thus eliminates sickness and doctor bills; the subleasing of the summer home during the weeks that it is not being used by the owner brings in an income that provides a good interest on the money invested and last, but not least, a summer homesite, carefully selected in a wisely restricted shore community of high character, is bound to increase in value, making it one of the best investments in the entire real estate field.

Choice Home Sites.

Among other outstanding summer communities adjacent to Washington, Long Beach offers an excellent opportunity to secure many choice homesites at rock bottom prices, as it is new, and is rapidly acquiring much popularity among the better class of Washingtonians. The fact that it is not a resort, but a private home community with many outstanding features, is bound to enhance values as the population increases.

During the past year many improvements have been installed, new streets laid out and many cottages built and occupied by their owners, all of which tends to increase values. Plans are now being laid for many other innovations and improvements, as it is the purpose of the management to make this bayshore community one of the finest watering places in the immediate vicinity of the Nation's Capital.

The trip to Long Beach is an enjoyable ride over well-paved highways through a countryside rich in scenic splendor. It is reached by driving out Pennsylvania avenue southeast, through Upper Marlboro, and following the Solomons Island route through Prince Frederick direct to the entrance of the property.

VARIETY IS MAGNET FOR VIRGINIA BEACH

Resort Offers Every Form of Sport, From Swimming to Golf.

Virginia Beach is situated 18 miles due east of Norfolk. It is accessible over the electric division of the Norfolk Southern railroad and by automobile and motor bus over concrete boulevards.

From May to November surf bathing at Virginia Beach is the delight of old and young alike. Horseback riding through the old picturesque Cape Henry Desert is a popular sport that can be enjoyed throughout the year.

Sporty Golf Course.

At Virginia Beach is located the famous Princess Anne Country Club golf course, pronounced by leading professionals to be one of the sportiest and most picturesque courses in the country. This course, cut through a pine forest and flanked by the ocean on the east and Linkhorn Bay on the west, is open throughout the year. The Princess Anne Country Club also provides excellent facilities for tennis.

The hotels, boarding houses and private cottages have a total capacity of approximately 25,000 persons.

The big new resort hotel, the Cavalier, with its private beach club, cabanas, indoor pool and 18-hole golf course, is one of the finest of its kind in the South. It is the center of social life at the resort.

Seaside Park Popular.

Seaside Park, at Virginia Beach, has a frontage of 1,500 feet on the Atlantic Ocean. This modern resort park is equipped with a large outdoor salt water swimming pool, located on the beach and alongside the 2-mile ocean promenade; has pavilions for dancing and picnics and amusement devices for the young and old and its bath houses are commodious and spotlessly clean. This year the park will be under owner-management, with Thomas P. Thompson as general manager.

There are two casinos, open air salt water swimming pools and amusement parks at Virginia Beach, both equipped with high class amusements typical of the most modern resorts.

Crystal Beach Installs Cooling Beer Garden

There has been completed recently at Crystal Beach, on Magothy River, near Annapolis, a large beer garden to accommodate the many visitors anticipated during the warm months. There is also a huge bowling alley building.

To reach Crystal Beach, turn east at Annapolis and follow road signs.

Virginia Seashore Ready For Influx of Vacationists

Indications Are Resorts Around Norfolk Will Enjoy Season Surpassing That of Last Year; Many Diversions Are Offered.

The Virginia seashore—Norfolk and its environs—have been plumed for another season of diversions for the thousands who flock to this section for summer relaxation and pleasure.

This year Virginia seashore will be mighty good to the vacationists for "somebody" has been mighty good to this famous area. The "somebody" is none other than Mother Nature herself, for she has hoarded here everything needed for a perfect vacation—healthful climate, miles of clean white sand beaches, the magnificent ocean, a background of fragrant pines, the salt sea air to whet your appetite and the bounty of Southern food and cooking to delight you at table time. A splendid group of hotels and cottages from which to choose the place for you to spend your vacation; famous golf courses, all outdoor sports—tennis, trapshooting, horseback riding, ocean bathing, archery—all this and more and everything ready for a banner season.

The resort communities which line the 25 miles of smooth, white sand beach at Virginia Beach are spic and span and bright as a result of the spring activities of painters and contractors and offer more to the tourist and vacationist for the season of 1933 than ever before in their history. The railroads, the steamship lines, the air lines and the bus lines are offering the lowest rates in years to the Norfolk area and all hotel rates have been reduced. This season accommodations to suit any purse are available.

Officially the resort season opened May 27 in this vacation locale which, besides cherishing hallowed memories of the intrepid colonists who first settled hereabouts, is replete with natural facilities for nearly every imaginable recreation conceived in the pursuit of sport and pleasure.

The outlook for the summer is decidedly encouraging with hostelries at Virginia Beach already reporting indications, based on early arrivals, of a good season ahead. A spirit of optimism, despite a few reports to the contrary, is in evidence and, although no record-breaking season is anticipated, those interested are looking forward to bettering last season's business.

Norfolk—centrally located in this much publicized resort section—is ready for the influx of vacationists and tourists with the principal hostelries preparing to accommodate pleasure seekers from far and wide.

Virginia Beach, Cape Henry and other beach resorts in the vicinity of Norfolk and Portsmouth at the Virginia seashore all have new and improved facilities for the thousands who take advantage of their recreational attractions. These attractions include surf bathing and all the other normal beach sports, as well as golf, tennis, horseback riding, fishing and other unexpected allurements.

And with the sporting and recreational attractions at Virginia seashore is combined a historic interest which is rare. For the Virginia seashore is the cradle of the Nation. Cape Henry is the spot where the first permanet English settlers made their first landing in America, and where they stayed for a short period before proceeding up the James River to Jamestown. And close by is Jamestown itself, as well as Williamsburg and Yorktown, in which so many significant events in the early history of colonial and national America took place.

Seaside Park at Virginia Beach has a frontage of 1,500 feet on the Atlantic Ocean. This modern resort park is equipped with a large outdoor salt water swimming pool located on the beach, and alongside the 2-mile ocean promenade has pavilions for dancing and picnics and amusement devices for the old and young, and its bathhouses are commodious and spotlessly clean. This year the park will be under owner management, with Thomas P. Thompson as general manager.

Virginia Beach, on the Atlantic Ocean, offers to the visitors numerous attractive hotels, cottages, boarding houses and apartments. Among the hotels is the famous Cavalier, already a popular rendezvous for the elite. The Cavalier Hotel this year will be under the management of Sidney Banks, managing director. L. H. Windholz, president of the D. Pender Grocery Co., is president of the Cavalier Hotel Corporation and also is president of the Cavalier Country Club and the Princess Anne Country Club.

New Dustless Roads Lead to Herald Harbor

The beautiful picnic grounds at Herald Harbor, equipped with tables and benches, is ideally situated for annual outings, whether a week-end trip, vacation, or just to spend the day. Here the vacationist will find a fine orchestra for dancing each evening, a cafeteria and refreshment stand and crabs caught and cooked as you like them.

Motorists to Herald Harbor will now find the roads entirely free from dust, an improved road now taking care of tourists to and from the harbor.

Point Patience Offers Nettleless Salt Beach

Salt water bathing entirely free from nettles is much enjoyed at Point Patience, at Solomons, Md. Other salt water sports, boating, fishing and crabbing with the regular amusements usually provided by the various beach resorts are to be enjoyed here.

Hotel accommodations with an excellent cuisine is provided. Furnished cottages are provided for those persons who prefer this type of accommodation.

Atlantic Coast Line Offers Bargain Fares

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad announces that one of a series of bargain rate round trip excursions from Washington to Florida and Southern points will be operated over the Fourth of July holiday, leaving Washington on July 1 and 2, returning July 8. Tickets are on sale at less than the one-way cost.

Similar excursions will be available over the Labor Day and Thanksgiving Day holidays, with two other excursions August 4-5 and October 6-7. A reduction in round-trip Pullman fares from Washington South in conjunction with these low rail rates is also in effect.

CRYSTAL GROTTOES THRILL TO VISITORS

One of the greatest natural wonders of the Blue Ridge Mountains is the Crystal Grottoes of Maryland, formerly known as Washington Crystal Caverns, located at Boonsboro, just 60 miles from Washington, over paved road via Frederick.

The first emotion felt by the visitor to the grottoes is one of wonder and surprise. There is never a dull moment throughout the entire journey and the mind does not have to be overworked or the imagination stretched to realize the Niagara Falls tumbling over the cliffs, formed from pure white limestone on the famous Garden of the Gods, the cactus gardens and other formations on the way into the caverns; and by gradual descent one reaches the floor, just 150 feet underground, and the ceiling at this point is 75 feet overhead.

Not to be forgotten formations are the blanket market, stalactites, beautifully draped from the roof of the cave and of great breadth, but exceedingly thin—probably one-sixteenth of an inch. So wonderfully clear are these curious stalactite pendants that an electric light placed behind them shows through the stone.

Crystal Grottoes are on the road to Antietam Battlefield and in the center of scenic and historic country. A pleasant circle trip can be made via the caverns to include either Harpers Ferry or Hagerstown.

Mago Vista Draws Crowds.

Mago Vista, on the Magothy River, is attracting many Washingtonian motorists over the summer week-ends. It is a short drive out of Annapolis.

QUAINTNESS IS LURE TO ORKNEY SPRINGS

Resort Located 2,300 Feet Above Sea Dispenses True Hospitality.

Many Washington people will be guests this season at Orkney Springs, which is one of the largest and most popular mountain resorts in Virginia, located 2,300 feet above sea level, picturesque and quaint in its remarkably cool and restful setting of great oaks, green lawns and virgin forests.

This charming hostelry of the Old South, dispensing true Southern hospitality, was named after the Earl of Orkney. Its 1,000 acres adjoin the Shenandoah National Forest of 500,000 acres, with its 500 miles of trails and 200 miles of road open to the public. Surely, nothing could be purer than the pine-laden breezes that come sweeping over three mountain ranges to the guests of Orkney.

These lands were surveyed by George Washington, then a lad of 20 years; owned by Lord Culpeper, Lord Fairfax, "Light Horse" Harry Lee and Robert E. Lee. This land is full of romance and history, and is renowned for its wonderful mineral springs, which are true fountains of health.

Orkney, which has accommodations for 500 guests, is noted for the great beauty of the surrounding country, and for the ideal life of pleasure and recreation enjoyed by its guests. Golf, tennis, riding, dancing, swimming, bowling and hiking are but a few of the sports available.

Orkney is reached over all paved roads, a number of routes through the beautiful scenic country of Virginia being available. The shortest route is via the Winchester road, turning at Boyce for White Post and Stephens City, then taking the valley pike No. 11 to Mount Jackson, from where a fine, newly paved 12-mile road leads over the mountains to Orkney Springs.

Accommodations at Orkney are of the best and special attention is given to the old Virginia meals for which the hostelry is famous.

Bus Line Puts Resorts In Easy Reach of Capital

The fishing grounds at Solomons Island and the cool, sandy shores at North Beach and Chesapeake Beach are now easily reached by the recent service installed by the Washington, Mariboro & Annapolis Bus Lines.

The large, comfortable buses of this line are now making frequent daily trips between these points and afford an enjoyable week-end or an opportunity to spend the day at these popular resorts.

REST FOR EYES AT VIRGINIA CLUB

When the visitor to the Cavalier Country Club at Virginia Beach wearies of looking at the rolling expanse of golf course, he (or she) can turn around and gaze at something like this. For this reason, the Cavalier Club is believed to be one of the few country clubs in existence combining such diversified modes of recreation. The girl, second from the left, is said to be a champion putter.

GOLFING AT VIRGINIA BEACH

Princess Anne, recipient of numerous tributes, probably never had a finer bon mot than having a country club at Virginia Beach named after her. Here is a scene of the golf course. Like many beautiful things in life, including women, this course has its hazards. Professionals, who know how to overcome such things, say this is one of the most beautiful courses in the world.

Short Line Buses Cut Travel Costs

Vacationists seeking economy for trips this summer are planning to do much of their traveling by bus, according to officials of the Short Line system, whose terminal is at 633 F street northwest. The large modern buses of the Short Line system are equipped in Pullman style with reclining chairs, pillows, porter service; in fact, every possible facility for the comfort and safety of passengers. Atlantic City and the nearby Virginia resorts are proving very popular as destinations of passengers using this means of transportation.

Good Fishing Spots Found Near City

Morgantown, Cobb Island and Rock Point are in the heart of the "real fishing country" of the lower Potomac. As such they attract not only the seasoned disciples of Izaak Walton but many who enjoy yarns spun by fishermen with 40 years' background.

These spots are reached in about one and a half hours' drive, over good roads. The route takes the motorist through Waldorf and La Plata.

4,005 TIMES
around the world ★

★ 24,902 miles around the earth

Taking 10,000 miles as an average year's mileage on a "Chernerized" car and multiplying it by the number of Chernerized Cars Sold, we arrived at this amazing figure. Not one reason . . . but several, have made us so successful. . . 1. Our prices are the lowest in the city. 2. Our terms are the easiest. 3. Our trade-ins more than liberal. 4. Every "Chernerized" car is put through, at least, 25 expensive reconditioning operations whether it needs it or not . . . And 5. The name "Chernerized" is an emblem of quality and a bona fide guarantee of satisfaction. Convince yourself——today!

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

CROWNED king of the Persians even before he was born, King Shapur II, who ruled from 310 to 379, was one of the greatest Persian rulers of the dynasty. He had three older brothers, but when his father, King Hormizd II, died, the Persian magnates killed one, blinded another and imprisoned the third.

The throne was reserved for the unborn child of one of Hormizd's wives. This child was named Shapur, and declared king of the Persians even before he was born. The country was ruled by his mother and the magnates until young Shapur came of age, at which time he took the country over and led many successful conquests against neighboring nations.

During his reign the collection of the Avesta, sacred writings of the Zoroastrian religion, was completed. Shapur's small military power defeated Constantius II in the field repeatedly, but was unable to successfully occupy his conquered lands.

Strange as it seems, the gold beater need only lift his heavy hammer once to pound for a full minute on the skin covered squares of gold which, by his repeated blows, he reduces to microscopic thinness. The hammer rebounds off the gold each time it strikes, and the only power applied by the gold beater is on the downstroke.

Colors give added realism to strange things and happenings illustrated by John Hix on a full page in The Sunday Post.

TREASURY RECEIVER FOR PARK BANK IS ASKED AND OPPOSED

Second Depositors Committee Fights Plan to Avoid Action by Courts.

Appointment of a Treasury Department receiver to manage the tangled affairs of the Park Savings Bank was requested yesterday of the controller of the currency by representatives of stockholders, directors and depositors.

Opposition to the petition was immediately manifested by a depositors' committee, headed by J. W. Thompson. The attorney for this group, E. Hilton Jackson, challenged the authority of the Treasury Department to appoint a receiver.

Seeking the Treasury receivership, Dr. Wade H. Atkinson, representing the directors committee, and Frank J. Sobotka, speaking for another depositors' committee, appeared at the Treasury Department with their petition. No indication was given regarding the time for a decision on their plea.

Hope for Economy.

Those seeking the Treasury receivership, in preferece to a receiver appointed by the courts, believe that the former course would save a large amount of the depositors' money, which under a court receivership would be absorbed in receivers fees. If a Treasury receiver is appointed the petitioners believe that any of three possibilities of future procedure would be available. They are, petitioners say:

1. Reorganization of the bank.
2. The sale of the bank as a branch of a larger bank.
3. The way would be open to apply for participation in the proposed new Hamilton National Bank.

"The appointment of a receiver by the court," Dr. Atkinson said, "would mean a slow liquidation, accompanied by unreasonable expense. Furthermore, under a Treasury receivership, all claims would have to be presented within 90 days, while under a court receivership, I understand, the adjudication of claims is a slow, tedious and expensive process."

Reconciliation Sought.

"In the interest of the poor depositors, the affairs of the bank should be brought to a conclusion in the most economical way, instead of paying fabulous fees to receivers and their attorneys."

Hope that the two depositors' committees would reach an accord was expressed last night by members of both committees. Conferences are being held by attorneys for the committees with a view to uniting on a program.

The committee headed by Mr. Sobotka is composed of representatives of the Northwest Business Men's Association, Columbia Heights Business Men's Association, Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association, Columbia Heights Citizens Association, Mount Pleasant Citizens Association and the Columbia Hegihts Citizens Forum.

Mass Meeting Group.

The depositors committee headed by Mr. Thompson was appointed at a mass meeting of depositors held in the Central High School.

The bank was plunged into its circumstances by a shortage of $1,700,000, for which Robert S. Stunz, former official of the bank, assumed full responsibility before he committed suicide.

The depositors of the bank and the public generally were asked yesterday by Benedict McNeil, former assistant cashier of the bank, to withhold judgment on the indictment against him in which he is charged with conspiracy to commit larceny and embezzlement from the bank.

In a statement issued through his attorney, James J. Slattery, he said:

"At the proper time it will be shown that my client's dealings with the bank were legitimate and proper. All loans made by him are covered by ample security."

Engineer Recommends Trash-Burning Dump

Sanitary Engineer J. B. Gordon yesterday recommended to the District Commissioners that a burning dump for District and Federal trash be established on the east side of Anacostia River, near the Benning race track, to take care of the overflow from the Georgetown incinerator. The Northeast incinerator will be closed tomorrow for the new fiscal year by congressional edict.

The Anacostia River site was one of several suggested by Maj. Joseph D. Arthur, District Engineer for the War Department. The city refuse department will no longer be able to dispose of commercial trash.

Shoes Stolen by Burglars.

Four pairs of shoes, valued at $12.50, were stolen from the W. L. Douglas shoe store at 901 Pennsylvania avenue northwest Wednesday night by burglars, who broke the glass from a window.

Thief Gets $35 in House.

A thief, who entered by a rear window, yesterday stole $35 in cash from the home of Mrs. Mary Wolff, 1501 Harvard street northwest.

Oldest Trees in Capital Are Sassafras Growing on Grounds of Soldiers Home

VETERAN IS SUICIDE BY LEAP OFF BRIDGE

Samuel M. Gilmore, Patient, Often Visited Site of His Death.

Hurling himself over the railing of Calvert street bridge, Samuel M. Gilmore, a war veteran, crashed to his death yesterday afternoon. He had been a patient at St. Elizabeth's Hospital 12 years.

He was identified later at Emergency Hospital by his father, Bernard Gilmore, of 622 Portner street northeast.

Frank Settle, a colored taxi driver, told police he was hailed by Gilmore at 2438 Nichols avenue southeast, and told to drive to the bridge. Settle said he thought little of being told to drive to the bridge as he had often taken Gilmore to the same place. He would leave the cab and walk down the steps into Rock Creek Park, Settle said.

However, yesterday afternoon E. M. Morningstar, of 1429 Potomac avenue southeast, another cab driver, said the man left the cab at the west end of the bridge, turned about and vaulted over the railing. His body hung in a tree for an instant before striking the ground.

Recognition of Autogyro Pleasing to De la Cierva

"Americans are very nice to recognize me," Juan de la Cierva, inventor of the autogyro, said last night at the Carlton Hotel. The Spanish flyer, who invented the "windmill plane," received the Guggenheim medal for outstanding contributions in aviation Wednesday.

The Spaniard; Harold F. Pitcairn, who holds the American rights to the invention, and Jim Ray, veteran pilot, flew in from Chicago, arriving at dusk. They made the journey in seven hours, detouring thunderstorm areas, in an autogyro. Today they fly on to Langley Field, Va., to witness tests by the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics.

Veterans May Have Been Saplings When Norsemen Landed.

Guardian of Ancient Landmarks Fears They Are Near End of Days.

Older than the memory of any American, already full-fledged saplings perhaps when the Norsemen first reached this continent 1,000 years ago, are the two gnarled sassafras trees standing in front of Scott Building at Soldiers' Home.

That they are Washington's tree patriarchs no one questions, but even their approximate age has never been determined, according to H. E. Pammel, superintendent of grounds.

Lincoln's summer home stands 100 yards away, and certainly the "Great Emancipator" must have spent many a warm afternoon under the cool shelter of their leafy boughs.

Many horticulturists and foresters have examined the trees and offered various estimates of their age, ranging from 300 years to more than 1,000.

The only fairly exact way of determining a tree's age is known as the "increment" method. A bore is driven through the trunk about three feet from the ground and a segment taken out intact. The rings are then counted by the use of microscopes.

It has been found impossible to use this method on these trees, Pammel said, as the interiors of the trunks have been rotted almost hollow. Pammel says he is afraid these two grand-daddies of 'em all haven't many more years to live.

One peculiar feature of both trees is that they are double-trunked. This is not common with sassafras and was caused by their sprouting from double seedlings.

They are about three feet in diameter at the widest part of the trunk. The average sassafras is about a foot and a half across at its full growth.

2 HAMILTON BANK OFFICIALS NAMED

Erskine Gordon Appointed Trust Head; A. J. Linn Is Comptroller.

Two more officials of the proposed Hamilton National Bank of Washington were named yesterday. They are Erskine Gordon, trust officer of Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., who will be trust officer of the prospective bank, and Arthur J. Linn, comptroller of the same institution, who will be comptroller of the new bank.

Officers for the new bank previously named are Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., who will fill these duties with the coming bank, and Joshua Evans, jr., president and conservator, District National Bank, to be a vice president of Hamilton National Bank.

Mr. Linn, whose first work will be arrangement of a system of accounting for the main office of the proposed bank and its branches, is a native of New Mexico and entered the banking business at Carlsbad, in that State, in 1912. He came to Washington, D. C., in 1919, as a general bookkeeper for Munsey Trust Co., leaving that company to become auditor of the former American National Bank in 1922. After engaging in practice as a public accountant in 1924, he became comptroller of Federal-American National Bank in 1926.

Was Auditors' Chairman.

He was chairman of the auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association in 1931-32 and has served on many of its committees. In 1931, he was in charge of the accounting and auditing conference held in connection with the Pittsburgh convention of the American Institute of Banking. He is a member of the District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Maryland Association of Certified Public Accountants. Mr. Linn has contributed numerous articles to financial publications, dealing with accounting, economics and real estate.

Mr. Gordon is a lifelong resident of the District and was graduated from Columbian, now George Washington University, with the bachelor of laws degree in 1904. He was admitted to the bar and began practice the same year. In 1917 he entered the Army in the World War as a first lieutenant of Infantry and was discharged from military service in August, 1919, as a major. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the French Croix de Guerre (with palms) and Legion of Honor medals for bravery in action.

Practices Law Here.

Returning from France, he resumed the practice of law, specializing in fiduciary cases, and in 1920 became trust officer of the former Continental Trust Co. In 1923 he was appointed trust officer of Federal-American National Bank and organized its trust department. He is a member of Chevy Chase and Racquet Clubs.

Mr. Gordon said yesterday that a large majority of trust department clientele of both Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. and District National Bank already had been interviewed and have requested the proposed Hamilton National Bank as fiduciary successor to these respective banks. As a result, he said, the new bank will have an established trust department the day it opens.

Greek Units Will Honor New U.S. Envoy Tonight

A banquet will be held tonight at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel in honor of Lincoln MacVeigh, the new United States Minister to Greece, by the American Hellenic Educational and Progressive Association and other Greek societies.

The Greek Minister, Charalambos Simopoulos, will be among the several distinguished guests.

It Lingered

Police Hear Protests on Fish-Truck Odor in Hot Night.

"Smelling to high heaven."

So persons living in the 400 block of Sixteenth street southeast described the effluvia of a truck parked there with a load of fish and crabs last night.

The heat and the fish made an extraordinary aroma, they said. Police were called but the driver of the truck, who had been at the corner eating "snowballs" had driven away before they arrived.

With the truck gone its odor lingered through the night.

DISTRICT OFFICES ARE STRUCK HARD BY RETRENCHMENT

39 Dismissed, 106 Positions Abolished and Furloughs Ordered in Program.

Thirty-nine dismissals, abolition of 106 positions, and rotative furloughs in practically every department constitute the District government's retrenchment program for the new fiscal year, Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, personnel officer, revealed yesterday in an analysis of recommendations approved by the Commissioners. In addition, six or eight employes have been transferred to other branches of the District or Federal service.

Sixty-seven of the 106 positions abolished were vacant, and these salaries will relieve the effect of furloughs. Four positions were abolished because of the marriage clause, eight because the holders were retired for 30 years' service, and the remaining 27 because of reduced appropriations. The latter are released without prejudice and may be reemployed when conditions warrant, Maj. Donovan said.

Rotative furloughs will range from 1 day to 25 or 26 days, the latter probably in only two departments. Practically all dismissals are of minor employes drawing less than $2,400. No department heads or major executives are included, save in the furloughs.

Losses In Executive Office.

The executive office abolished a vacant position of clerk; the purchasing division abolished two vacant positions, a clerk-typist and a clerk. The building inspector's office loses eleven employes, two of them clerks and the remainder engineers and inspectors. The plumbing inspector dropped an assistant inspector and a temporary inspector.

A vacant position of audit clerk is abolished in the auditor's office. The municipal architect's office escaped expected large-scale dismissals, temporarily, at least, by transfers of three associate engineers to construction rolls, a retirement and elimination of a vacant position in the repair shop. The transfers, it was explained, "will be continued for such a time as the limited funds are available."

An inspector of weights and measures is dropped and the post abolished, and the positions in the Highway Department testing laboratory are eliminated because the laboratory was closed by Congress. Four of these employes were retired, however, two under the 30-year provision and two for age. The streets division cut off a foreman, an overseer and an inspector.

Foreman Is Retired.

A foreman with 30 years' service is retired from the trees and parkings division, while the surveyor's office abolished three positions, two chainmen and a computer, because of a decrease in work. The city refuse division abolished two vacant positions.

While five positions are eliminated in the department of vehicles and traffic, three are vacant. Six positions are abolished in the electrical department; two of them are vacant, one is dropped under the marriage provision and one has had 30 years' service.

The Police Department abolished the following vacant positions: Four sergeants, 21 privates, 2 detective sergeant allowances, 3 janitors and 1 laundress. The Fire Department eliminated the fifteen privates' jobs, now vacant. The following vacant positions were eliminated in other departments: Health, a nurse and caretakers; Workhouse and Reformatory, farm steward; Water, three clerks.

Five Water Department employes assigned to the water waste survey were also dismissed because the appropriation for the undertaking was cut from the District bill.

Mercury Hits 92; More Heat Today

The thermometer reached 92 degrees yesterday. The Weather Bureau forecasts similar heat for today with thundershowers in the afternoon or at night a possibility.

Yesterday's heat was the indirect cause of one death. John Thomas, colored, 15, who lived at 15 M street southwest, was drowned swimming in Washington channel.

Two persons were prostrated. They were Frank Selby, 29, of 2907 Olive street northeast, treated at Emergency Hospital, and Millard F. Williams, colored, 83, of Takoma Park, Md.

PARKING LOT FIGHT TO COMMISSIONERS

Owner and House Members Will Complain of Ban Placed by Police.

Claiming he is being discriminated against by the District Commissioners and police, who have prohibited parking in front of his large barbecue stand at 2500 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, Henry C. Stephenson, jr., will take his complaint direct to the Commissioners today, supported by a delegation of five Congress members, he announced last night.

In the petition he plans to present to the Commissioners, Stephenson maintains that for the last week police have harassed his place of business and driven away his customers by not allowing them to park on the 40 by 100 foot parking lot between the restaurant and the street.

Stephenson asserts that two months ago police informed him that he could no longer use the parking lot or driveway entering it from Pennsylvania avenue, both of which had been used for at least 25 years for that purpose. They based their order, according to Stephenson, on a regulation which prohibits buildings on the parkway from being less than 160 feet apart. The parking lot is not on city property.

Stephenson asked for two months in which to construct a parking lot in the rear of the building. The new lot is not quite completed, but police refused to grant him more time and yesterday placed four signs prohibiting parking in the old lot. For a week uniformed officers have been stationed in the lot to keep patrons from parking.

The barbecue man says that due to the falling off in his business he has had to dismiss ten waitresses during the week. He also maintains that the regulation under which the original order was given has not been enforced for years and is not now being enforced in other parts of the parkway.

Chicken Bone in Throat Puts Woman in Hospital

A chicken bone lodged in her throat sent Mrs. Sara Alley, 76, of 3720 Macomb street northwest, to the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital last night.

Although her throat was badly lacerated, physicians announced she apparently swallowed the bone en route to the hospital. Mrs. Alley was found alone in her apartment when neighbors were attracted by her cries. Eighth Precinct police took her to the hospital, where she was released after treatment.

POLICEMAN ACCUSED OF ACCEPTING CASH

Weinberg Suspended After Complaint He Agreed to Help Autoist.

A Sixth Precinct policeman was suspended last night after complaint that the officer had accepted $10 as part payment for the use of influence to bring about restoration of a driving license.

The suspended policeman is Pvt. Meyer Weinberg, 31. The action was taken after the complaint was made to Assistant Superintendent L. I. H. Edwards yesterday afternoon.

Inspector Edwards said that the complainant was a man identified as "Berger." The latter said, according to the police official, that his driver's permit had been revoked because of traffic violations.

Weinberg offered to intercede with traffic officials for the complainant, said Inspector Edwards. He set $25 as the price to be paid if the permit was restored, it was charged.

Later, said the police official, Weinberg obtained $10 on account, though not accomplishing the project. After a period of waiting, the man again approached Weinberg and asked for the $10 back. Weinberg, according to the statement to police, refused the rebate. The complaint to police officials followed.

Armed Man Robs Telegraph Branch

While Connecticut avenue shoppers meandered by unaware of anything being irregular within the office, William J. Dunham, manager of the Western Union at No. 1104 on that thoroughfare, found himself looking into the business end of an automatic pistol yesterday afternoon when changing a $10 bill for a well-dressed man about 35 years old.

"Keep your head under the counter, I will get it," the stranger said as Dunham opened the safe to change the bill. The robber scooped up $140 in bills and fled in an automobile.

Dunham told police the man was accompanied by a well dressed woman who remained at the wheel of the car while the man held him up. He also said he was sure the couple had been in the office earlier and sent a telegram to New York.

The office has been held up several times within recent months, as has also the other office farther up Connecticut avenue.

One-Legged Man Held On Joy Riding Charge

His alleged joyride brought to an abrupt end when the automobile he took from a Washington motor concern brought up against an ice truck, in Baltimore, William Holmes, 27, colored, yesterday was ordered held for the action of the District Grand Jury under a bond of $2,000.

Holmes, who only has one leg, was charged with joyriding.

Man Is Given Year For 4 Bad Checks

Four 90-day periods of penance were given to Hubert S. Sherron, 38, yesterday when he was brought before Judge John P. McMahon, in Police court, to receive sentence.

Hubert passed a $10 check on the St. Paul Lutheran Church, receiving $7 in change. The difference was credited at the time as being a contribution. Later, with similar resourcefulness, he passed three additional checks on lumber merchants here.

Police became suspicious when all four checks were returned by the banks with the customary notations on them. They asked Hubert for an explanation, and then let him tell it to the judge, who gave him a total of 360 days for his writing ability.
